Dear Michi:

A status report on WINTER REFLECTIONS by Sachi Wada Seko. I talked to Regina Griffin at Scholastic, who said that a number of editors there had reviewed the text and were intrigued by it, and that Jean Feiwel, the editor-in-chief, presently was considering the manuscript, as well as the business manager, Barbara somebody. Regina said that Scholastic has instituted a budget cut, and that, combined with the fact that this would be an unusual book for them to publish, might end up with a negative decision. But on the other hand the material has attracted a lot of interest from the editors. So, at this stage I'd say we have a 50/50 chance. Best.

Yours sincerely,

Bill
