I have a cold at the present - It seems to be getting worse every day. I believe I've never been laid up before I was just wondering what it would be like to be laid up in bed with all the care from sisters and mother. In a way I feel that if I do get laid up it's going to be dreadful just sleeping in the bed all night and all day. Just the thought of such things is enough for me. Even thinking about it makes me feel like more weaker.

As I listen to the radio program "lights out", I wonder how in the world anyone could make up those spectacular stories of supernatural power. They always have a play on ghost-like figure who haunts someone in particular. I wonder if it could be true. I mean about ghosts. There had been quite a lot of talks of "ghost" appearing at the pottery farm in search for food. I don't know how true it is but those stories scare me. The thought of being scared without any proof kind of seems silly but that's how I think.

I've worked for two months and about 2 weeks now as a part time worker. When I first started to work I didn't know anybody. They were all total strangers.
One by one I got to know them. How lost I had felt during the first couple of days. It had seemed to me as tho' every eye was upon me. How I've got used to those people so beyond me.

The other day while attending a basketball game I overheard an argument. Mr. A had said that Mr. X came from a town called Westland. Mr. B then said bluntly that Mr. A was wrong. Now when a man is convinced against his own will, his opinion is not altered. Mr. A had his pride to consider when Mr. B told him he was wrong.

Remembering names is a difficult art if one does not try to remember them. When I meet people I ask questions about them and look over their features and if there is a unusual one I try to fix it firmly in my mind. The next time I see the individual I have a better than 50-50 chance of remembering him. In every individual there is an outstanding characteristic in him.

Last night, a girl friend of my mother came to spend her evening at our apartment.

She is lots of fun to talk to if one has a good subject to talk on, but the only trouble of her is that, she always goes opposite, and starts arguing. If she starts to argue, probably can stop her because she'll keep on doing it until somebody gives in.

My first thought of her was that she will never get along with anybody and she will never have friends, or tends to lose it one by one.

From my viewpoint, she is a show-off. Every time she has something new, she brings it over and talks about them. I don't like that kind of a girl because I don't like to do those things myself. She sure likes to brag about herself too. One time her boy friend's brother was walking along, and she called out loudly saying, "That's my boy's friend's brother!"

Did you ever stop and think what type of foolish things and play you have done when you were still a child.

I can still recall the time when I was a young boy about nine.

One day some boy about my age and I decided to play pirates.

There was an old walnut tree nearby my house and behind it was an irrigating canal which was about two feet deep.

Well, we all climbed up into the tree. One of the boys decided that it would be a swell idea to pretend that we were sailing on a rough sea so we all began to shake the branches which we were on.

I was on the lowest branch and the weakest of them all for I couldn't climb as well as the others and the first shake was strong enough to send me flying into the canal below. Though I wasn't hurt badly, just a black-eye and some bruises.

That was my end of tree climbing for a while but before I knew it I was climbing trees within a week.

Now when you get older you can't believe that you would repeat the same foolish things after you get hurt once.

My personality card for today is about dogs. As I was going from the dressing room to the P.E. field, I noticed a dog chasing a car. I wondered why they do that for. Some people say they like to bite the tire when it is turning forward on the road. I think it just likes to chase it because it's moving, because the dog I had liked to bite me when I started to run but when I stop he didn't even try to come near me. "Why" I don't know.

Almost every major event is preceded by a number of less important incidents. This also applies to the buying of clothing. You start with a slouch, next you have to have a coat to match. Finally you have a overcoat, a shoe, and numerous other articles. This must be one of the characteristics of a human being.

One of my pet peeves is that I give in too easily to my friends. For instance I go to the library every night for my own benefit. There is a certain girl that is always asking me to take back or take out a book for her and it gets very monotonous. I did it for her every time, because I don't want to be selfish. But it is getting if I don't do it for her - she says I am "selfish."

It's not that I don't want to do it, but she is taking me for a ride, because she expects me to do, and I always go that way. I don't want to be selfish but yet made a fool out of at the same time.

The lady who lives in the next apartment is deaf, but not completely. Whenever someone talks to her they have to shout. She has a very modern hearing device but doesn't wear it because she seems to be ashamed of the fact that she is deaf.

I have often wondered what she has to be ashamed about because I know how it feels to be deaf. When I was about 10 years I was almost completely deaf too.

Because she doesn't want people to know she is, her little children suffer because she cannot hear them very well.

I know how it feels to be deaf and I had often wondered why she makes other people suffer let alone herself.

Yesterday I started to thinking about my dogs which I left home. There were three of them - Vinnie, a dachshund Skipper II and Blackie our two other dogs. He left Vinnie and Skipper II at "Happy Landing" home for dogs and I know they are well taken care of. But Blackie was left with the family who rented our home and the farm.

Due to the fact that Blackie was with us since a puppy we couldn't take him to the home for dogs. He was so use to our place and to our family. Although from time to time we hear from the family who took care of place, but they tell us Blackie is getting along fine. But many times I wonder whether this could be true, and I keep on wondering about good old Blackie.

On this coming May 8, I will be in an internment camp for one year. As I think back over the year, I often wondered if one year of my life has been wasted, and yet I can't say it was wasted for I have learned many new things, had new experiences and did quite a few things during my spare hours which were helpful.
But just thinking of one year and not thinking of the things I've learned, did and saw makes me think that if in the coming year
I am still here, I will <sup>try to</sup> improve my doings by my mistake of last year.

It has always been said that it takes all types of people to make a world, and it's your job to get along with them. Of all the types I can't get along with only one type even though how hard I try. Maybe I'm the one that the other person can't get along with. I wish I knew.

The type which I can't get along with is a person who always changes their opinion. One of my friends is that type & the type that changes their minds <sup>exactly</sup>. For instance whenever she goes any place she never asks me to go with her, even though I don't expect, and again whenever I go some place with my friends, she always ask me to take her too. From day to day she would say she likes a certain person and the next day she hates them for no reasons at all.

She always disagrees with every thing and never attempts to compromise. I have often wondered if that her personality or just her way of acting to impress me and my friends.

Whenever we go somewhere together she always depend on me to do every thing for her. If I tell her to do something instead of depending on me all the time it hurts her feeling. Although I don't mean to hurt her feelings she feels badly if I tell her. She is the type of girl who is kind of scared to talk to anyone.

But sometimes I feel like telling her to stand on her own feet because she had two of them as well as any one else.

Playing Basketball was fun. While playing, you would forget everything what's in your mind.

For instance, bothering some neighbors, who wish to study, and making unnecessary noises, which makes the folks come out to see what's happening, whether it's a argument or playing games. First it to be a real game, so they too came to join in, and had a grand game and also good time.

Learning about inheritance was fun. Just what are the things we inherit from our parents or ancestors? Why is that one is taller or shorter than another member of the family. Why is it that one has a darker or lighter hair than others. Complexion are being light, medium or dark. It is said that, we must have inheritance from one of our parents and I think it's natural to learn these, and it really was worthwhile learning these.

Going to a dance & party is all right, except for something to know, such as dressing up, whether it's informal or formal. For instance a small group party, you think it's informal then, find it to be formal one. It's because they're just different and they don't like a big crowd, and really wanted a formal one. It was my first time out there, so next time I dressed ~~up~~ up a little different & then I found find it to be informal although it was a big crowd.

When playing a game of basket ball or any other sports a persons inside personality is displayed. Deep concentration and perhaps excitement causes the players to become either irritated or selfish. It is through their motions and expressions that they are judged by the by-standers.

Some people are gifted with grace and level-headedness to prevent criticism. Those who are not - often, are talked about and taken apart. It is only human nature which makes us individuals with actions and thoughts of our own.

There are two types of people in this world. One, you want to know and become their friend. Another, the type you just don't feel liking knowing.

The people, you feel, that are companionable are usually happy, neatly dressed and willing to say "hello".

The people, you don't feel, that are companionable are usually sulky, conceited and unwilling to say "good day".

Many persons desire friendship that is true. That kind of thing is quite a rare factor, though.

Friends have a great deal of influence on the actions and the speeches of practically any person. Although many people do not believe they are lead by others - they actually are.

There are many cases where people have become rowdy, impolite and unthoughtful. I, honestly, believe the majority turn for the worse while a minor group improves themselves. It is quite difficult to acquire clean cut habits, but it is quite easy to take to bad habits.

To prevent poor habits one must have a mind of his own to sense what is healthy and unhealthy.

I can now say that I have accomplished one thing since evacuation - a thing everybody knew how to do except me. It is bicycling. At home, my brother used to push the bicycle and I'd start on a very short ride which would end with the bicycle on top of me. After few tries I came to the conclusion that I'd never learn.

The miracle happened on April 2nd at Newell Relocation Center. With the resolution that I'd learn if it killed me, I got on the bike. The bicycle finally decided to give me a ride. Believe it or not.

Participating in various social activities, a person comes in contact with many personalities. At parties you find many people whom you would class in the "rowdy" group. They seem to have great deal of fun and I often envy them for it. But I just don't admire them. Is it because I am rather on the quiet side and envy them for the fun they have that I feel this way? I often wonder. By the "rowdy" group I don't mean the naturally popular, have fun group, I mean people who, for instance, make unnecessary noise etc.

It has been said that the girls talk more than the boys do. That may be true, but in my family, the boys sure don't lose from the female sex. My brother's vocal cords are forever in operation. As I look back to pre-war education, I recall vividly how the boys in my civic class were always quieted down by the teacher. The teacher would say, "All right girls, or I mean boys - quiet down. I almost mistook you for girls that time."

So Block 21 won by one point against the Block 19 girls.
