Uriyu, who lives at 33-4 Porter's Cap avenue, was at the N-Z window at 4:50 a.m. (even before the sun came up) having rushed from his graveyard shift job at the Yellow mess.

George waited in line for four hours and 10 minutes and, as he had not eaten breakfast, headed straight for the canteen as soon as he received his free book.

Kushino, 37-21-7, and Mayeda, 56-31-6, were first and second in the A-M line having arrived at 6:30 a.m.

Waiting in line has been minimized by a new system which was started Thursday.

Candidates Tell Goals in Student Relocation Plan

"Why do you wish to continue your studies?" was the question put to a cross section of the scores of youthful Centerites who turned in student relocation questionnaires on Thursday.

Tommy Sugihara, from Long Beach JC, stated, "I don't want to waste my time doing nothing. My mind is stagnating. I am studying to become a chemical engineer and wish to make use of my time by continuing my studies." Tom's choice is the University of Michigan.

California grad Chizuko Kitano's expression is realistic. She said, "After the war is over, there will be many problems which will need to be solved. That is why I wish to continue graduate work in social service."

A graduate of Polytechnic high school in Los Angeles this summer, Helen Haruko Matsunaga will endeavor to become a leader in culture after the war. She plans to work for a BA in music and sociology at Rockford College in Illinois.

Masaru Ito, a geometry teacher, plans to attend a college well known for its chemistry courses, such as Harvard or Chicago. He says he wants to be a research chemist and that he might as well continue his education as he is now a UCLA senior.

Of the score of shoes that adorn doors of Santa Anita's, the aluminum one owned by George Nakayama, 25-25-5, is about the shiniest of the lot.

Nakayama found it on the ground under the PACEMAKER building. "About a month ago, I was working as a carpenter on that particular site," he explained, "and while I was leveling off the ground, I dug up at least 26 horseshoes, aside from the aluminum one I kept for myself."

Counting the nails on his shoe, 17-year-old George announced, "I've still got five years of freedom." -- by Nance Nomura.

Students Bear a Great Burden

The opportunity is being offered nisei students now in assembly centers by the National Students relocation committee of continuing their higher education in Eastern colleges.

The need of such a policy is very ably expressed by Dr. Monroe Deutsch, Vice President and Provost of the University of California. If students were not allowed to continue their studies, he says, the wastage of human material and training would be tremendous. Secondly, these students are American citizens who will again resume their places in American society, and these students should be aided and encouraged to train themselves in American surroundings for a successful life. Finally, Dr. Deutsch concludes, these young people will be scattered among young Americans, and would, thereby, feel themselves all the more American citizens--and their Americanism will not be sullied by a sense of bitterness.

Those students who may be fortunate enough to be granted this chance of continuing their studies must also accept with it the responsibilities which are tacit in Dr. Deutsch's statement.

For each of the students entering school in the East, where Japanese Americans have been rare, will be the cynosure of many eyes. Upon their scholarship, their conduct, their thoughts, their sense of humor, their adaptability, will rest the verdict of the rest of the country as to whether Japanese Americans are true Americans. So, upon these students will be the onus of proving to people to whom they are strangers that the first word in "Japanese Americans" is merely an adjective describing the color of our skin--not the color of our beliefs.

There is no place for cry-babies or weaklings in this program. The burden must be borne.

The introduction of a pin-ball game, albeit a miniature one, as another piece of office furniture has the addicts of the staff busily tossing hips hither and yon, applying body-English to the elusive marbles.

All but our Copy editor who claims that pin-ball games are no fun unless they light up, ring bells, wave flags and pay off.

A long one

And our eye-shade goes off to the Tulare News and the Pinedale Logger, both of which appeared on the Fourth of July with stupendous issues. The Tulare News had a three-color, 12-page job and the Logger came out with 16 pages.

When we finish reading G'wan with the Wind (frankly, we haven't started it yet) we hope to be in practice for these two tomes.

A short one

Sammy in her Femme Form column Wednesday asks, 'Was it you who bellowed for water the other day in the mess hall?'

What we'd like to know is who shouted 'BEER!' and started 489 mouths watering copiously?

Stumble bums

And the many necessary excavations and dirt-heaps on Gallant Fox lane, which keeps all the pedestrians hopping, makes us wonder if Galloping Fox wouldn't be a more apt name.

Get it?

Shig Masunaga, District VII woodpecker (census taker, to you, kid) asks if we've heard about the 15-story hotel that is planned for this Center.

'That for?' we bit.

'To house all the rumors.'

(Rumors--roomers. Now go away, kid, you bother me.)

Tropical rainstorm

Our primitive, but efficient, air-conditioning system which consists of one (1) burlap curtain, and seven (7) tin cans adds a tropical touch to the office.
