Book V

"The ideals set up by the founders of this society are threatened more at the present time than ever before in the history of the country."

Even the past some state governments have passed measures that did not abide with the constitution. These incidents rendered the minority groups, but today more than ever before the ideals set up by the founders of the constitution are threatened. The time it is not the question of sewing loose, or eligibility of attending public schools, it concerns the right of an American citizen. Although we are of a minority group it does not make us any less a citizen.

The constitution has no provision saying that one group of citizen has better rights than others could have, but the holds true, even taxation cannot be justified. Why were the Japanese American men not the German or Italian American men were not? The constitution says "equality and justice for all. Some people are not it as "equality" and "justice" for the Constitution. If the Constitution is to apply to every one, the ideal of equality and justice has been violated when we were executed.

There is talk of sending all people of Japanese ancestry back to Japan. They say that a citizenship paper does not make us any more American than our parents. If the people of America begin to send the minority groups back there will be nobody left because America is made up of minority groups.

I think it is threaten now more than ever before because the rights of the Filipinos (of minority groups) are threatened.
