

Tommy Kujama.
Sociology Period 6.

1. The size of a population inhabiting an area helps to mold the social life and to set its social problems.

Tule Lake, for example has an population of over 18,000 in an area which is only large enough for about 10 - 15 thousands residents.

Even now with the total population reaching well over 18,000 they are planning to bring many more <sup>(people)</sup> ~~settlers~~ from other centers. This will increase the problems in Tule Lake as well as the population.

There are certain social advantages because of the large population. First, it will bring together <sup>would</sup> many different types of people, which ~~help~~ us to be with people of the same thoughts and mind. Next, we can meet many different kinds of people and learn how to get along with them ~~as well as~~ ~~well~~. (~~learn the things they do.~~)

Also with these advantages comes many disadvantages as well.

- (1) It would be a very hard task for the administrative officers to satisfy the majority of the people because of the arguments which would be brought up <sup>by</sup> the ~~other~~ groups which are not satisfied.
- (2) Seriousness of the spreading of disease. If any epidemic or disease should come up in this camp, it would be very hard to control it because of the crowded condition of this camp.
- (3) Next, the arguments and fight between the different groups of persons which might occur and cause many disturbance.

Even with many other disadvantages the W.R.A. are still ~~trying~~ <sup>going</sup> to put more + more residents in Tule Lake. In my opinion I do think an serious social problem will come up in the near future.