TEAMS EXPECTED FOR SEATTLE GO

BY ELMER OGAWA

SEATTLE. - With entry deadline but 24 hours away, bowling impressario Fred Takagi announced that everything is set for the greatest keg classic of all—the 12th JACL National Championships.

Takagi actually has an army of 50 helpers, including non-bowling JACLers, who are helping out on the souvenir program which goes to press this week. A corps of tabulators, statistical typists, committee heads and planners for two social events are set to go at the sound of the gong.

First is a pre-tournament mixer to be held on Monday night, Mar. 3. Then, nearly 100 teams, including 12 from Hawaii, will be competing on the lanes.

It is estimated that 600 to 700 will show up at the awards dinner dance on March 8 at the Olympic Hotel's newly - constructed super ballroom, and Fred allows it'll be the biggest Nisei dance of all time; everything is being done to afford out-of-towners a good time.

Guest of honor and main speaker will be Royal Brougham; sports editor of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer who attracted nation-wide attention with his militant editorials in behalf of Nisei bowlers in the fall of 1949.

LANDOWNERS — As recently as 15 years ago, most of the Issei and Nisei farming in Colorado's San Luis valley were share-croopers. Today nearly all own their own land - from several hundred acres up to a thousand. Water makes the West bloom, and there is plenty of it here. The Nisei are prospering.

Climate and Issei-Nisei skill and industry have helped to make the San Luis valley a vast garden basket. The growing season here is relatively brief, the valley being a mile and a alf above sea level. But for this same reason, this area produces row crops of exceptional quality - lettuce, spinach, cabbage, cauliflower, carrots, turnips, peas. During harvest season, carload on carload of produce leaves the valley for markets in the south, midwest and east.

It's generally acknowledged that the three brothers Mizokami — Mike, Sam and Tom — are the largest Nisei shippers. They farmed a thousand acres last season, plan to expand this spring. Imagine if you can a railroad carload of radishes. That's what the Mizokamis ship out each day, in addition to other produce, during the peak of the season. Among shippers—and the list is by no means complete — are the Sumida brothers, Harry and Kanji; Yoshida Farms run by father and son, Frank and Clarence; Oba brothers; Charles Hayashida; Roy Inouye, and others.

OTHER OCCUPATIONS — While farming is the Valley's economic backbone, a number of Nisei have found other occupations here. There is, for instance, Shiro Enomoto, of Alamosa, dental technician, who makes dentures for most of the dentists in the area.

Dr. Ben Konishi, also of Alamosa, is a veterinarian. His sister, Ruby, is a nurse at nearby Monte Vista. Grace Uyeda, also of Monte Vista, reportedly expects to get her nursing license soon. Jim Kunugi is a jeweler in Monte Vista.

Alamosa is also the site of Adams State College, a state-supported four-year school with an enrollment of approximately 700. One of the stars on President Fred Plachy's faculty is Nisei Dr. William Oba, acting head of the history division. Dr. Oba, as we heard it, is a mighty busy man. In the summer he helps with management of the Oba Brothers farm and produce shipping house. Still another member of the Adams State faculty is Dr. Tom R. Thomson whose father was a techer in Japan for many years and whose mother was a Japanese. Dr. Thomson is extremely well thought of as a teacher of chemistry and other sciences.

WHY THE JACL? — In view of the ideal Nisei-Caucasian relations in the San Luis Valley, I was curious as to why the JACL movement is so strong. Roy Inouye, the Mr. JACL of these parts, had the answer.

Roy, it turns out, had spent a good many years in the Valley but had moved out to California shortly before the beginning of World War II. Rather than evacuate to a WRA camp, he hurried back to the Valley. Roy found that many of his old friends were glad to see him back, but he didn't have quite as many friends as he had thought.

Since he couldn't get his old farm back, he had NISEI SERVE ON L. A. to rent one in another section of the valley where he wasn't known. Here, until he established himself, he encountered open hostility, threats and general uneasiness simply because of his race.

He remembers those days when anyone remarks about how well the Nisei are accepted today. And he credits the JACL program, nationally and locally, for the change in public opinion. That's why he had his neighbors believe in the JACL movement.

THE GEISHA FOR TOWNSEND HARRIS

Hollywood is still in the midst of a Japanese cycle, and Its newest star of Japanese ancestry was to arrive in the movie capital last week from Japan. She is Eiko Ando, 23, and she is playing the role of the legendary geisha, Okichi, in John Huston's drama about Townsend Harris, "The Barbarian." Harris, the first American consul in Japan (he landed at Shimoda in 1856), is being portrayed by John Wayne.

When Buddy Adler, head of production at 20th Century Fox, decided to make the Townsend Harris story, he originally had Marlon Brando in mind for the Harris role. Brando, however, had just made "Teahouse of the August Moon" and "Sayonara," and didn't want to be typed into a Japanese background and withdrew. Adler then got the movies' top male boxoffice draw, John Wayne, an actor better used to rough-and tumble brawling than in the finesse of diplomatic relations. Wayne, similarly typed as a cowboy and a soldier-of-fortune, wanted the part as a breakaway from his usual parts, and he was especially interested because one of the motion pictures' greatest talents, John Huston ("African Queen," "Moby Dick") had agreed to direct the picture.

Adler then ordered an intensive hunt for the girl who would become Okichi, whom legend says was the beautiful geisha of Shimoda who was given to Harris by the twon's officials. Their love affair is now celebrated in song and story throughout Japan, although there are now some who contend the Okichi legend is false. On the other hand Kikou Yamata in "Three Geishas" (John Day, 1956) retells the Okichi story and notes that the Japanese writer, Sunshi Muramatsu, who researched the Okichi legend a generation ago, is said to have found an urn labeled "Okichi" and ostensibly containing the geisha's ashes.

Whatever the truth of the matter, the Okichi legend is a very real thing and is generally accepted throughout Japan, outdating even another legend, that of the young Cho-Cho-San and her American naval lieutenant which has been immortalized in "Madame Butterfly."

Twentieth Century-Fox scouts scoured the world for an Okichi, just as Warner Brothers agents looked the globe over for the Hana-Ogi of "Sayonara," until they located a Los Angeles housewife named Miiko Taka who proceeded to turn in an acting chore which may win her an Oscar nomination this month.

The 20th scouts had several essentials in mind. The actress must be tall, because she would be playing opposite John Wayne who is 6 feet 4. She must also be able to speak English. These requirements ruled out most of Japan's established actresses, though the 20th people did try to approach a number of Japanese stars. They did it directly-in a country devoted to ceremony and formalism-and created an uproar when they didn't go to the companies which held the actresses' contracts but approached the young women individually.

Of the 184 girls tested by the 20th people, one stood out. Her name was Eiko Ando. She was tall, 5 feet 7, and she could speak English because she had been born in Manchuria of Japanese parents. She could also speak Russian and Chinese, as well as Japanese. Her figure was regarded as un-Japanese (36-23-38) and she was a former burlesque queen of Tokyo's Nichigeki follies.

"I'm not a very typical Japanese girl," Miss Ando cautioned the American moviemakers. Her role was that of a great geisha, practiced in all of the feminine arts. The picture already was in production when Eiko was chosen and, in a few weeks, she had to learn the geisha graces, learning how to strum a samisen and to sit, walk and pour a drink.

Miss Ando's training had been in another direction. She had wanted to be a singer (she had little opportunity to become an actress in Japan because of her height) and had studied concert singing, in Japan and in Europe, In between her concert training, she did her stint in burlesque.

"I didn't mean to, when I applied for a job at the Nichigeki theater," Eiko told David Lancashire of the A.P. the other day, "I went to get a job as a singer and for a while I sang. But I was so young, and those managers, they were so smart, and soon I had no clothes on."

The Nichigeki theater billed her as "The Tokyo Venus." She didn't like burlesque but was signed to an 18 months contract. When it was up she went to Europe with her mother and studied voice.

'THE BARBARIANS' SHOOTING OVER

"The Barbarian," in color and CinemaScope, is completed except for the background narrative which Miss Ando will record in Hollywood in order to bridge those passages in the picture which are in Japanese dialogue. Huston, incidentally, made the picture, he said, as a Japanese film for an American company, rather than as an American film between made in Japan.

Twentieth Century Fox now has Miss Ando under a threeyear contract and will start looking for some other story material for her if studio bosses are convinced she will make the sort of impact Miiko Taka did in "Sayonara."

"On behalf of the queen committee and the Sait Lake Chapter, we extend our most sincere appreciation to them and wish that it were possible to crown each one of the candidates a queen," he added.

Membership Drive

Since this is the convention year, the local chapter under the co-chairmanship of Mrs. Rae Fujimoto and Mrs. Shiz Sakai are concentrating their efforts at the present time to rewrite the 400 membership list of the past year, which was the largest in local chapter history.

Local membership dues are $3.50 per year. Renewals by mail are also being solicited.

The chapter board hopes that all-out community support would establish a new record.

Cherry Trees

The Utah State Capitol, famous for its beautiful Japanese cherry blossoms in the spring and attracting thousands of viewers, must now replace 36 dead trees surrounding the front driveway. They were frozen by severe cold several years ago.

Secretary of State Lamont Toronto has inquired with the local JACL to see whether the Japanese American community would be interested in making a contribution to replace the trees with the names of donors filed as a permanent record with the state.

The chapter has agreed to assist and appointed Henry Kasai, chairman of the Capitol Cherry Tree Donation committee. Individuals and organizations wishing to participate in this project should re-

28 Weeks' til National JACL Convention Days

The National Director's Report

By Masao Satow

MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN REPORT

To Salinas Valley JACL goes the distinction of being the first to complete and turn in its 1958 memberships. A very close second-by one day-comes the San Luis Valley Chapter of southwestern Colorado. Both of these chapters have exceeded their previous highest figures.

Meanwhile, as is usual around this time of year, we are own interests that we have a re- The chapter, which opens its 21 getting many Issei calling at Headquarters to pay their 1958 membership dues. We still have a lot to learn from the Issei. Many of them consider membership in JACL as the natural sequence to achieving naturalization. Last week a 79 year old Issei brought in his membership as well as a contribution of $20.00. Though his resources are very limited and he is applying for social security, he wanted us to know he appreciates the work JACL has done. It was a very humbling experience.

Dr. George Hiura has just converted his 9th year 1000 Club to Life Membership. George was one of those who helped to get our national organization started, served as a prewar President of the Sonoma County Chapter, and was active in the Chicago Chapter for a number of years. He now does his golfing around Palo Alto and is a member of the Sequoia Chapter.

NC-WN DC-The first quarterly meeting of the Northern California-Western Nevada DC brought out the usual good representation from the chapters. The flu bug kept Chairman Akiji Yoshimura at home, and Vice Chairman Buddy Iwata of Livingston filled in most capably; in fact, as if he had written up the council meeting agenda himself. This despite the fact that we stuck the agenda under his nose and told him to take over just minutes before the meeting. Our good friend Earl Raab of the S.F. Jewish Community Welfare Council did a stimulating job in discussing mental health in relation to prejudice.

Our JACL elder statesman Saburo Kido was most appropriate as the speaker at the banquet marking the 30th Anniversary of the San Francisco Chapter as he told of the early efforts to get organized and projected his thinking into JACL's future. Two time S.F. President Jerry Enomoto ably articulated as toastmaster. It was good to honor among the prewar Presicents Dr. Terry Hayashi, Dr. Carl Hirota, Mikio Fujimoto, and Jave Tatsuno. Dr. Hayashi was named National JACL President back in 1934 by virtue of his Presidency of the chapter hosting the National Biennial convention that year.

Adding much to the affair was the surprise appearance of our dynamic Mayor, George Christopher, who was not expected back from his high level talks in Washington. Consul General Nishiyama graciously gave up his Sunday evening to he with us. And among our good friends who helped to cele-Frate the occasion were Supervisor Henry Rolph who led the fight for the San Francisco FEPC ordinance in the Board of Supervisors, and San Francisco Assemblymen John Busterud, Edward Gaffney, and Casper Weinberger, all of whom actively endorsed the fair employment measure in the State Assembly.

Being on jury duty has already put us a week behind in our paper work with immediate prospects of further delay. We trust our members and chapters will bear with us for the rext several weeks as we try to fulfill this important obligation of citizenship.

MARYSVILLE—Despite being under the weather, Akiji Yoshimura did a sparkling job in emceeing the Marysville Chapter installation. Chapter members brought their non-Japanese neighbors and friends as guests to give President George Okamoto a good sendoff. Enthusiasm for JACL is high in this area, and the members have done a wonderful job.

Incidentally, George Okamoto recently walked off with the singles championship in our Northern California Nisei Bowling Tournament. No doubt his part ownership of the alleys in Yuba City has some correlation.

INTERMOUNTAIN—We had a good work session with the Salt Lake Convention Board and are pleased to report that things are under control. The meeting was made pleasant by the nine charming Salt Lake Chapter candidates for National Convention Queen. A new item which will be announced soon by the Convention Board is the National oratorical contest for younger people between the ages of 16 and 21, with district winners to vie at the National Biennial. There will also be a companion national essay contest.

The Intermountain DC meeting in Pocatello gave us a chance to sandwich in a meeting with the Idaho Falls Chapter members with a good representation from the Yellowstone Chapter. After dinner the chapter members demonstrated they had learned something in the "step, step, quick, quick" classes sponsored by the chapter. The Intermountain DC carries on a hospitable custom where the host chapter provides both luncheon and dinner for all the attending delegates. While the IDC meeting concerned itself primarily with backing up Salt Lake on the National convention, a considerable amount of discussion was devoted to the youth program within the chapters under the chairmanship of Salt Lake barrister Mas Yano.

NATIONAL RECOGNITIONS-National Recognitions Chairman George Inagaki called us the other day to clear on the work of his committee in the search for the Nisei of the Biennium and the JACLer of the Biennium. Despite a slipped disc which keeps him in a reclining position most of the time, George assures everyone that he is feeling okay and that this phase of our national program of which he is in charge will be properly attended.

OUT OF THE HOSPITAL AGAIN

After some couple or three weeks in the hospital, one loses almost all contact with the local community and with JACL doings. Under a hypnotic desire for recuperation, one is apt to be slow in picking up the lost threads. Friends, acquaintances and people have asked about the incarceration, causes, troubles and consequences pertaining thereto. We answer most of them at considerable length, trying to liven up the narrative with anecdotes and what we consider funny happenings in the hospital at the time. Somehow, it must be because of our distorted sense of humor-the "funny" things fail to register well, while the clinical details might entertain.

The story of our private feud with one of the chaplains seemed to bring out some interest from some of our listeners; however, we shall get around to that one later. Couple of other guys were in the V.A. hospital at the same time. Both were former Go-For-Brokers. One had his leg chopped off good and proper in Italy, but it was phlebitis that brought him back. While there, he developed gout in the other foot. That complicated matters and won him an "absolute bed rest" tag on his bunk. But he was always sneaking off on crutches or wheel chair when least likely to be caught.

The other guy was discharged from the 442 and was able to amble around after some ankle surgery. But now, after each visit to the V.A. hospital, he leaves a little bit more of his leg behind. It reminded us of the character in "No-No Boy". For some guys, the war is never over.

THAT BOXING MATCH IN PANAMA

We hadn't mean to sidetrack when we started, but now the next logical question might be directed to the party of the first part: What were YOU in for? O.K., so we'll forget about the gripe against the chaplain for the time being. The immediate cause of our distress (and it was terrific) was a bowel obstruction. You know, something like Ike's ileitis. As things developed, we can even make out a case to show that it was service-connected and here's why.

After a series of complicated X-rays in which your old photog friend suffered indescribable "tortures" in the interest of making a good picture, the X-ray staff came up with some masterpieces.

During one of these consultations, one doc asked: "Didn't you ever suffer any acute pains right along here?", pointing to the left side of the diaphragm. We started to think. He said, "Oh, never mind-you'd remember it if you ever had 'em."

Then we remembered: the catchy pain for some two or three years every time we attempted to pick up something with more of the weight on the left side. It was a result of that fight, or rather that army "boxing match," we told the doc. Well, he explained that the X-rays showed an old injury to the diaphragm and it was right in the immediate area of the obstruction caused by the scrambled up descending colon.

That "fight"-. It seems we get deeper into this yarn with time. It was one of those intramural affairs among the boys in the anti-aircraft battery down in Panama. The biggest guy in the battery was a young Brooklyn lad named Cioffe, who was 20 years old, weighed 220 and stood about 5-11 . . . The next biggest guy in the battery was one named Ogawa, age 37, weight 185 and stood almost 5-8 with new heels. So there was a heavyweight event made to order. "That was murder," one of the docs commented, pointing out the 35 lb. and 17-year advantage, but it wasn't so much that way.

After a couple of good jolts that almost knocked our senseless head off, we started to take inventory of things. After all, if I couldn't duck in time, maybe he couldn't duck in time if I took the offensive. And why shouldn't I, after so eagerly absorbing all the boxing instruction that came my way? It worked swell. We rocked him and rocked him good with good hefty left jabs right into the middle of the third round. Then the guy sorta wised up and swung a haymaker left-hook with all of his beef behind it right into that now-tender spot we described previously. ... Naw, we didn't lose. It was a no-decision bout.

Now that we've gone this far, there's no more space left to tell about the feud with the chaplain. But this ailmentalthough not the result of enemy combat action deserving of a Purple Heart-nevertheless is service-connected. And if things ever get too critical, we'll have to raise a squawk to get the record straight . . . Sorry we couldn't tell you about the feud with the chaplain.

NISEI WEEK MAY FOLLOW VET'S REUNION

It may be a little too premature to discuss the Nisei Week Festival at this time but there's a great possibility that it will be held about two weeks earlier than usual in August.

The move to hold it earlier came on a request by the 1958 Nisei Veterans Reunion committee which will host the 15th anniversary of the founding of the 442nd RCT here, July 26 to Aug. 1.

Bigwigs of both the Reunion and the Festival committees felt that the nearly thousand delegates expected at the veterans shindig late in July could be capped with another week of festivities in Li'l Tokio sponsored by the local merchants.

A large group of visitors is expected from Hawaii, according to Paul Bannai, general chairman for the Veterans Reunion committee. The Islanders hosted the 10th anniversary hoopla and the Los Angeles committee hopes to "duplicate or top" what already is being considered one of the top affairs for all Nisei servicemen in the nation, including the Territory of Hawaii.

What with the biennial National JACL convention slated in Salt Lake City, Aug. 22-25, delegates can make it a "Roman holiday" by taking in three big events, all in a matter of one month.

JAPANESE HOME AT HUNTINGTON LIBRARY

Southland's enthusiams for things Japanese is something really to behold. We only hope it's not a thing of passing fancy. Whatever the reason popularity and interest in them seem to grow and grow.

The Huntington Library, which had mothballed a 1917 replica of a Japanese shoji-trimmed home, has decided to restore the wooden edifice as an Oriental showpiece for patrons.

It was artist Sueo Serisawa and architect Kazumi Adachi who helped the San Marino matrons group and Library officials to rebuild the house which was stored in a garage at the outbreak of World War II.

It appears that one of the women members of the elite matrons society visited Japan recently and took up flower arrangement, tea ceremony and the such. When she returned and learned of the unique Nipponese abode, believed to be the only one of its kind in the United States, she alerted her members to get the project going.

Katsuma Mukaeda, Downtown L.A. JACL chapter officer, has been quite instrumental in introducing the many cultural phases of Japanese art in the Southland.

SANSEI IN QUIZ-DOWN

It's not unusual also to see Japanese American faces beam ing on your television screens. And to show that the Sansei kids are doing quite well scholastically we were happy to see 50 per cent Sansei participation on a video quiz show just last week.

Two East Los Angeles elementary schools vied in the contest in which each was represented by a six-man team. On both sides were three Sansei contestants. Even though East Los Angeles well populated by persons of Japanese descent that combination is rather hard to beat.

POP AND SON PASS MILESTONES

Our older son Bennett just passed through his first milestone of life: he enrolled in kindergarten Monday, all bundled up and covered in a raincoat. It rained that day.

It seemed only yesterday we had him bundled up and returned from the hospital as a new born babe. How time flies! One of our milestones which we passed with mixed emotions was leaving the 39th birthday. There's something about "life beginning at 40" which the learned harp about. Suddenly you feel old. And you certainly need that extra lift to carry you over the threshold. Maybe we're being melodramatic but wait'll you get there.

The American 'Explorer'

Washington, D.C.

FRIDAY night (Jan. 31) will go down in history as an epochal one for the United States, and for the Free World, for on that night this Nation successfully launched its first earth satellite, the "Explorer". The four-month-old monopoly of the Soviet Union in outer-space has been broken and this country has again demonstrated its capabilities in matching democratic output with any other form of competitive government and living.

WHILE much of the prestige lost by the United States and the Free World by the orbitting of Sputniks I and II will be regained, and the period of humiliation and frustration forgotten, it cannot be overlooked that the "Explorer" is considerably smaller than either of the Russian satellites and that the souped-up rocket that launched it may be puny compared to the mighty intercontinental missiles that shot its communistic counterparts into orbit. Without doubt, the Russians will hold for some time the military and technological leads that these comparisons dramatize. And, here in Washington, it is anticipated that the Soviets may soon emphasizet heir leads by firing an even larger sputnik, possibly weighing a ton as contrasted to the "Explorer's" thirty and a half pounds, or what has long been described by military men as the "ultimate weapon", the ICBM or intercontinental ballistic missile.

BUT, the important factor that will influence national and international opinion is that the United States is at last underway in its program and that outer space is now an international concern and not the sole property of a single nation. Without doubt, the United States will fire other satellites into the sky and soon the age of space and inter-planetary travel may be an accepted era in civilization.

IT IS difficult to describe the feeling of relief and even of confidence that once again pervades Washington. Already there are warnings against complacency that will slow-down congressional and administration intentions to buildup the defense posture of our Nation, particularly in the missiles and satellite fields.

THE race to launch an earth satellite was won by Russia more or less by default, for the United States did not consider this program as any kind of contest and failed to assign the necessary priorities to the project to assure real competition. Indeed, there is evidence that the Army could have launched a satellite two years earlier than the Soviets did had it been given the required authorization and appropriations.

NOW, the race is for control of the Moon, for it appears agreed that the nation that controls the Moon can control the Earth. With the fate of mankind at stake, the United States cannot afford to allow any other country, especially one with aggressive designs, to win this contest.

THE internationalization of space that was created by America's entry last week creates a real challenge to the statesmen of the world. It is also an opportunity.

KEEPING in mind that the same rockets that sent the satellites into space can also carry hydrogen bombs to any target on Earth and that space platforms and devices may well serve as launching sites for these rockets, it would seem only common sense and self-preservation that the nations of our small planet would join to assure that humanity's interests are safeguarded in the incredible new epoch man is now entering as he breaks the bonds of gravity which have heretofore bound us and our artifacts to Earth.

WE ARE either at the threshold of mankind's supreme adventure or of his annihilation.

PRESIDENT Eisenhower in a letter to Soviet Premier Bulganin January 12 proposed to dedicate outer space "to the peaceful uses of mankind".

SENATE Majority Leader Johnson made the American position a bipartisan one by urging only two days later at a meeting of radio executives that the United States "demonstrate its initiative before the United Nations to join in this adventure into outer space together".

AS THE Democratic leader put it: "The dimensions of space dwarf our national differences on earth. If we are to win space as an outpost of peace, all men may-and shouldshare in that endeavor."

WHEN these overtures were made, the United States did not have a satellite in orbit. This prompted Soviet "boss" Khrushchev to suggest that the United States was proposing a "one-way" solution to a problem that we had been unable to solve.

NOW that both leaders of their respective "worlds" have demonstrated their capacities for launching both rockets and satellites, it is to be hoped that both nations will be willing and eager to internationalize or universalize space for the peaceful pursuit of greater cosmic knowledge for the betterment of mankind.

THE alternatives are so horrible to contemplate that it becomes the solemn obligation of every human being to join in the common cause of self-preservation by urging their respective governments and leaders to bring about an understanding regarding outer space that will bring about peace in our time for all time.

IN THE meantime, of course, the United States must continue with its program of negotiating from a position of strength, and not of weakness, for only when a nation dedicated to peace and human dignity like the United States remains powerful may it bargain with the Soviets in language they can understand to the end that all mankind may benefit.

DELAYED AGAIN

The often-delayed public hearing on a new County Fair Employment Practices Commission ordinance was again postponed Tuesday to March 18, when the Board of Supervisors was unexpectely confronted with a variation of the law already drawn up for action.

Supervisor Warren M. Dorn presented the variation in a modified form which would operate without benefit of a commission in cases where job discrimination safeguards are set up by contract between employers and governmental agencies or contractors.

Dorn Criticized

The substitute drew criticism as it was regarded as a "watereddown" version by Supervisor Kenneth Hahn. Supervisor John Anson Ford also took Dorn to task for "not informing this board of your. intention to present a differently worded ordinance."

Members of the Committee for Equal Employment Opportunity, which represents several minority groups and labor in favor of the new law, had gathered in force to argue for the measure. Frank F. Chuman was ready to testify for JACL on its behalf.
