WHY DID YOU JOIN THE JACL?

BY DAVID MUURA
Secretary to Nat'l Board

Long Beach
WHY DID YOU JOIN JACL?
This question would be answered in various ways by our 18,000 members. Whatever your particular reason may have been we hope that you will continue to be a member of the only organization expressly formed to promote the welfare of persons of Japanese ancestry.

Be sure to read the Nov. 2 edition of the PC. It will have a wealth of information about your organization.

Members have been complaining about the lack of action on the National level of JACL little realizing that the National program is dependent upon funds raised by the chapters through membership. Budgets have been kept at a minimum.

At the 1960 Convention you, through your delegates to the National Council, took the first forward step by raising dues one dollar in order that our house organ, the Pacific Citizen, could be placed in each member household. Everyone believed that an informed membership is the strongest type of membership that we can have. Why then was this step not taken years ago? Attempts were made in previous years, but these were thwarted by the pessimists that felt that a dollar increase in dues would result in a loss of membership.

1961 proved them wrong. JACL had its highest membership and for the first time in years the budget was met.

At the 1962 Convention just concluded, you again voted for a dollar increase in membership dues in light of the many legal and legislative battles ahead of us and an expanding youth program. The dollar increase at the present membership level will not, however, cover the budget that was accepted. We will have to swell our membership to 20,000 members. This is why it is so important that everyone of you renew your membership and if you have not done so, sign up your spouses, sisters, brothers, and friends.

NACJAL has been accused at the National and local levels of being run by a clique.

I'd be inclined to go along with the accusation because JACL is run by a clique, so to speak, of dedicated people who have a deep sense of public service. JACL is run by a clique that is doing something besides talking about the problems of the Issei, Nisei and Sansei.

How can you get into this clique? This clique is unique in that its membership is open to any and all who want to work for the welfare of its members and the community. Everyone is welcomed—the more the merrier.

Life will have more meaning for you when you do something for the welfare of others. Many people simply exist. They eat, sleep, work and play. Is this their purpose in life?

David Lilienthal once said, "Out of the best and most productive years of each man's life, he should carve a segment in which he puts his private career aside to serve his community and his country, and thereby serve his children, his neighbors, his fellow men, and the cause of freedom."

Let's swell the ranks in JACL, both in membership and workers. This is your organization! Work for it! Fight for it!

Li'l Tokio revives community hall plan

LOS ANGELES.—Plans for a Li'l Tokio community center where revived by the Japanese Chamber of Commerce at its regular board meeting Oct. 12 with five members appointed to form a 15-member Community Center Preparation Committee.

Kakuo Tanaka, JCC president, appointed Katsuma Mukaeda, Masami Sasaki, Ryohel Iwamoto, Masaki Ishibashi and Eiji Tanabe to the nucleus group.

Plans to establish a center were accelerated when the Chamber decided to sell its Evergreen Issei Rest Home at 134 S. Evergreen to the Evergreen Nisei Baptist Church for $20,000.

The chamber executive office will be moved from its present site to the St. Bldg., 125 Weller St., Rm. 202-204, soon.

Nisei in pilot plan to train U.S. aides

BERKELEY. — A pilot program which may become the prototype for new methods of training America's foreign aid experts gets underway on the University of California campus here this week.

U.C.'s Community Development Project, operating under terms of an $80,000 grant from the U.S. Agency for International Development, will begin intensive instruction of 18 technical assistance specialists assigned to the troubled Southeast nations of Laos and Vietnam.

One third of their study hours will be spent attaining fluency in the Laos and Vietnam languages. Linguistic instructions will be directed by Paul Tsutomu Tekawa of the U.S. Army Language School at the Monterey Presidio which will supply native teachers who are members of his staff of instructors.

The experimental training program marks the first use of non-government facilities to give extended instruction to U.S. technical assistance aides before their assignment to overseas posts, according to program coordinator J.D. Mezrow.

MEMORIAL MONUMENT IN DENVER TO BE ERECTED

DENVER. — A committee has been organized by the Cathay Post, American Post, to erect a Nisei war memorial monument next year, when the 20th anniversary of the activation of the 442nd Regt. Combat Team will be celebrated.

Yosh Arai and John Noguchi, of the committee, said the Nisei war dead of the Rocky Mountain area will be honored in this $10,000 project.

MERRILL'S MARAUDERS ASSN. TELLS ARMY ITS DISPLEASURE OVER FILM

JACLer's Protest Wholeheartedly Supported by His Wartime Buddies; Forwarded to Pentagon

LONG ISLAND, N.Y.—The 16th annual reunion of the Merrill's Marauders Assn. meeting at the Roosevelt Inn over the Labor Day holidays, expressed its unanimous displeasure over distortion of fact perpetrated in the film, "Merrill's Marauders", with the Dept. of the Army.

Part of the formal complaint requested that the Army "not lend its good offices or cooperation to producers of movies who distort significant facts of military history."

The Marauders pointed out the Warner Bros. film, which is based on Charlton Ogburn, Jr.'s book, "The Marauders", credited the combat intelligence exploits of its Japanese Americans to a Filipino. "I think his letter speaks for itself, as well as it does for the 117 Marauders who heard it," David Hurwitz, executive secretary of the association, told the Army.

Yoshimura reminded that "the role of the Americans of Japanese ancestry in military intelligence, not only in the CBI (China-Burma-India theater), but throughout the Pacific combat area, should be well known to the Department of Defense."

"We do not claim any special privileges for having shared in a common experience, but when specific actions and services performed by the interpreters (tapping of the telephone line, translating documents and crawling out beyond the perimeter of defense to listen to enemy conversations) are included in the movie, why should the part and credit be given to a Filipino?"

"To my knowledge there was not a single Filipino in the outfit, and if there were, they did not serve in combat intelligence," Yoshimura recalled.

While charges of disloyalty of the Japanese Americans were being published in the newspapers during World War II and racism was rampant on the west coast, it was impossible for Nisei G-2 personnel to disprove the charges since their activities were shrouded in military secrecy.

"The many assurances we had from the military that someday our work would be fully and properly publicized has never been fulfilled," Yoshimura declared. "Therefore, when the Dept. of Defense cooperates with the producers of the movie to distort a significant fact, I am moved to ask, 'Why?'"

Hate for Profit

Under the guise of patriotism, Hollywood peddled hate for profit during the war years with films portraying Japanese Americans as traitors in six different films, the Marauders were told, thus implanting in the public mind the "big lie."

Yoshimura added that the "product of that era continue to haunt Japanese Americans on the television screens across the country."

"We, Americans, concern ourselves and fret at times over the 'image' that we project to the peoples around the world. Yet, we woefully neglect the proper image of America for Americans."

"Why do we deny to our people the kinds of information of many races, colors and creeds who walk in our midst, and whose varied contributions make this a great and powerful nation."

"Why must we sell our nation short by distorting the favorable aspects and manufacture fears and suspicions, which weaken the fighter of national unity and security," Yoshimura's letter concluded.

(Yoshimura, former national JACL vice-president, is currently national chairman of the public relations committee and chapter liaison chairman of the JACL Japan).

nese History Project.)
This discrepancy between fact and film was particularly distressing to the Nisei comrades-at-arms, the Army was told by the association which attached the protest to a letter from Akiji Yoshimura of Colusa, Calif., a Marauder himself who was shocked by the liberties with the truth in the film.

Absence Explained

"The absence of Nisei GIs in the film was explained by Larry Tajiri, Denver Post entertainment editor, in his PC column of Aug. 17. A jungle setting was needed and the Philippine government, in attempting to attract Hollywood filmmakers, offered concessions to the producers. The islands also had areas which approximated the Burmese jungle."

(The following week, Akiji Yoshimura's Letter to the Editor was front-paged in the PC, scoring the philosophy of expediency as a way of life upon reading Tajiri's column. "It was of little comfort to those of us who trudged the weary miles over, under and through the jungles of North Burma," he wrote, "fighting the elements, the diseases, the terrors of behind-the-lines activities, and among other things a formidable enemy and trigger-happy friendly forces, to learn that we were 'sold down the river' as a matter of expediency.")

(This past week, after being informed the Marauders Association had protested to the Army Adjutant General, Yoshimura said he was gratified by the action and added that the position adopted by the Marauders Association was most heartwarming and reassuring to the many Japanese Americans who have been distressed by the deliberate distortions in the movie.)

Pentagon changing policy on cooperation with filmmakers

WASHINGTON.—The movie industry will find it more difficult from now on to put servicemen in front of cameras, the New York Times learned last week.

Although military cooperation has not been foreclosed, a major change in the Pentagon's policies governing cooperation with Hollywood have arisen from the filming of "The Longest Day."

Military cooperation with Hollywood started during the first World War but got under way in earnest in World War 2. The Army and Navy approached the movie producers to have training and orientation films made. The industry responded to advice on dramatic treatments that the services considered inaccurate or detrimental. The Pentagon has authorized cooperation in 45 pictures in the four-year period ending December, 1961.

Kennedy names Nisei to U.S. fine arts commission post

REEDLEY. — Dr. Hideo Sasaki, professor of landscape architecture at Harvard, accepted an appointment on the U.S. Fine Arts Commission at Washington, D.C., according to word received by his parents here this past week.

In addition to a landscape architect, the commission of seven includes an artist, sculptor, architect, city planner and a layman. Last year, his consultant firm of Sasaki, Walker & Associates with offices at Cambridge, Mass., and San Francisco, was awarded national recognition for its work on Foothill College at Los Altos.

Certificate of his appointment to the commission was signed by President Kennedy and Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

NEW GOP GROUP
SAN FRANCISCO.—A Japanese American Republicans of San Francisco group was formally organized here Oct. 10 and Steve Doi was elected charter president of the new local GOP unit.

Dan Inouye Senate boosters wary of Primary results

Mainland support reported by bipartisan group

(Special to the Pacific Citizen)

Daniel Inouye

Bipartisan committee for Inouye formed in S.F.

SAN FRANCISCO.—A bi-partisan committee for Dan Inouye for U.S. Senator was organized with Steve Doi as coordinator.

Although Inouye received a huge vote in the primaries, it was reported that he still needs additional funds to conduct an adequate campaign until Election Day. On the committee to date are:

Dr. Tokiji Hedani, Yori Wada, Dr. Himeo Tsumori, Dr. Kazuo Togasaki, Fred Hoshiyama, Dr. Robert Kiyasu, Tad Ono, Hatai Aizawa, Yasuo Abiko, Jack Kusaba, Howard Imazeki, Yone Sato, Sumi Honnami, James Kikuchi, Mrs. Amy Aizawa, Y. Hironaka, Wee Doi, Tom Hoshiyama, Marshall Sumida, Don Negi, Mrs. Michi Onuma, Tom Kobuchi, Edison Uno, John Yasumoto, Chibi Yamamoto and Todd Kamiya.

WASHINGTON.—Against only nominal opposition, Congressman Dan Inouye handily won the Democratic nomination for United States Senator in the Hawaiian primaries Oct. 6.

Of the record 172,000 voters turning out, Inouye had over 103,000, slightly under 2 to 1 over his Republican opponent Ben Dillingham, who had some 54,000 unopposed votes.

Yet, caution was expressed by Mike Masaoka, coordinator-director of the Bipartisan Committee for Dan Inouye for U.S. Senator, here this past week as Inouye staged his first week of high-gear campaign in the Islands.

Two factors—overconfidence on the part of his supporters and lack of funds to wage the general election campaign—were regarded by Masaoka as forces which must be overcome if the campaign is to be successful.

"The primary results should not be grounds for overconfidence, because Dan had only taken opposition," Masaoka declared. The six-way Democratic battle for the two seats in the U.S. House of Representatives attracted more voters than did the unopposed Republican candidacies.

"The Nov. 6 general election will be a Go-for-Broke affair," Masaoka predicted, "for the Republicans are going all-out to defeat Dan."

The Dillingham campaign is managed by Whitaker & Baxter of San Francisco, a public relations firm that successfully conducted several of Richard Nixon's earlier campaigns.

"That Dan needs a lot of financial help to compete with his millionaire opponent is well recognized," Masaoka continued, "especially since television is so expensive. Dan needs to contact as many voters as possible and to explain to them the issues and the philosophy that distinguishes him from his opponent."

Support from Mainland

(In Los Angeles, it was announced close to $4,000 had been raised by the Bipartisan Committee this week. Further support from similar groups in Monterey and San Francisco were reported this past week. Mainland support is also expected from other communities in the Northwest, Rockies, Midwest and the East.)

Dan's supporters and friends on the Mainland are convinced that his election would be "a most positive contribution to the efforts of persons of Japanese ancestry in America to gain equal rights and opportunities in all fields of human activity for all Americans, to enhance the dignity of all men, and to encourage international goodwill and understanding."

His supporters also feel that this is the year for a Nisei to be elected to the U.S. Senate. "There may not be another opportunity in our lifetime," Masaoka believed.

"Even if Dan Inouye were not of Japanese ancestry, we believe that by every yardstick for the U.S. Senate, he is the type of candidate that we of Japanese ancestry would want to elect," Masaoka added.

Symbolizes Nisei Advance

Inouye, a liberal-moderate, symbolizes the tremendous advances achieved by those of Japanese ancestry in America in the past 30 years. Born of immigrant parents in Hawaii, he volunteered at the age of 18 for the 442nd Regt. Combat Team. He won a battlefield commission, earned the Purple Heart with two oak leaf clusters, the Distinguished Service Cross, Bronze Stars, and other decorations which, with the loss of his right arm in battle, mark him as one of America's great WW 2 heroes.

Because of the loss of an arm, Inouye turned from medicine to law after his release from service. After graduation, he was elected to the Territorial House of Representatives, where he served as majority leader in his first term. He was elected to the last Territorial Senate. When Hawaii became the 50th State, he was elected its first, and thus far only, representative in the United States Congress. Two years ago, he was re-elected by the greatest majority in Hawaiian political history (134,000 votes).

Seldom have freshman lawmakers achieved so much in such a short time in Congress. He has been acclaimed by both Democrats and Republicans in the House for his contributions to his state and nation.

His record demonstrates he will not be pro-Japan or even pro-Nisei just because he is of Japanese ancestry, Masaoka noted. Such integrity has gained Inouye recognition as an outstanding legislator who puts the interests of his country and of his state before that of his ancestry.

'Image' Improved
Featured in the newspaper and magazine articles, on radio and television, he has contributed to improvement of the public image and understanding of Americans of Japanese ancestry.

In 1960, Inouye was named one of the ten outstanding young men in America by the U.S. Jr. Chamber of Commerce, and Nisei of the Bicentennial by the National JACL. Several weeks ago, Life magazine cited him as one of the 100 Americans under the age of 40 in the so-called "take over" generation.

"We here on the mainland want to help give Dan Inouye that Go-for-Broke chance to become the first U.S. Senator of Japanese ancestry," Masaoka concluded, "by inviting contributions from all interested parties, regardless of their race, creed, color or national origin."

Hard to Analyze

In a post-primary comment, Inouye found it difficult to analyze the vote "issue. Republican side and vice versa." (In Hawaii, voters at the primary may ask for a Democratic ballot or a Republican ballot—unlike California where a registered Democrat or registered Republican obtains a primary ballot of his political party only.)

On the island of Oahu, where three-fourths of Hawaii's voters reside, Inouye had 60,241 votes as compared with Dillingham's 40,533. On the big island of Hawaii, Inouye had 9,870; Dillingham, 6,186; Maui: Inouye—5,752; Dillingham—3,368; and Kauai: Inouye—4,844; Dillingham—2,613.

(The Christian Science Monitor reporter Douglas Boswell this week noted Hawaii appears certain to send the first Japanese American to the U.S. Senate on the basis of primary results. Hawaii's voters generally were not aroused by Dillingham's vigorous attacks on Inouye for his support of administration programs in the House of Representatives.)

ORANGE COUNTY STARTS HISTORY PROJECT FUND

SANTA ANA.—A belated start by Orange County JACL on the JACL Japanese History Project fund drive was announced this past week with a goal of $10,000. A direct-mail campaign will follow the personal solicitations now in process.

1st commercially grown roses hailed in Watsonville

WATSONVILLE.—The Nakashima Nursery Co. of San Leandro this past week shipped its first commercially grown hot-house roses from here. The quality was surprisingly excellent, according to Mitsuteru Nakashima, president of the firm.

For several years, smog has hampered its production in San Leandro, where its company has been for 40 years, and began looking for a coastal area. He finally purchased a 30-acre farm on San Juan Rd., for about $100,000 and built all-aluminum and glass greenhouses at a cost of about $300,000.

Nakashima said Japan-made Asahi glass was used throughout, first of this type in Northern California. He predicted that within the next 40 years Watsonville would become the flower center of Northern California because of its mild, smog-free climate.

CHICAGO MEMBERSHIP IN 1963 HAS 1,250 GOAL

CHICAGO.—An optimistic note accompanied the Chicago JACL call for 1963 membership, which opened this past weekend. Membership chairman Ted Kometsani has declared a goal of 1,250. The campaign has outlined two phases of action: direct mail approach until Jan. 1 and a so-called "mop-up" action that entails door-to-door canvassing. Kometsani hoped Chicagoans would sign by mail to cut down the latter phase to a minimum.

$9,000 to study fungus awarded

DAVIS.—Dr. Joseph M. Ogawa of the U.C. Dept. of Plant Pathology and L.D. Leach, department head, this past week received a $9,000 grant from Gerber Products Co. to conduct research on this question:

"Can fungi, especially the molds that attack fresh fruits and vegetables, develop resistance to chemical controls?"

Nobody knows, but the possibilities are there, Ogawa noted. Many examples of insects developing resistance to pesticides are known, but few for fungi. The new study will attempt to determine whether the fungus can adapt itself to new conditions.

OIL ROYALTY CHECKS GO TO SWLA LAND OWNERS

LOS ANGELES.—Many Issei and Nisei property owners in the Southwest area have been receiving royalty checks from the Union Oil Co., as the well near Adams Blvd. and Western Ave. began producing oil.

A few years ago, two oil companies staged a spirited campaign to sign up property owners about a mile radius from the well. First checks were about $15.

87th Congress Adjourns

Washington, D.C.
LAST SATURDAY (October 13), the Second Session of the 87th Congress finally adjourned sine die. The Senate adjourned first, at 3:40 in the afternoon, with the House following about an hour later, at 4:46 p.m.

Barring an unforeseen emergency that would require a special session in November or December, the 87th or First Kennedy Congress is officially dead, as are the many bills on which final action was not completed prior to adjournment.

The First Session of the 88th Congress will convene at Wednesday noon, January 9, 1963. A special resolution was adopted to this effect, since by law the next session should begin on January 3.

REPUBLICANS were quick to label the last session the longest, the most quarrelsome, the most frustrating Congress in recent history. Democrats, on the other hand, were equally quick to point out that of 35 major Administration proposals, 40 were approved in one form or another, for a batting average of 73 per cent. In the First Session, President Kennedy's average was only 62 per cent. By comparison, former President Eisenhower batted 39 per cent in his First Session and 38 per cent in his Second Session.

The Republicans, while conceding that the volume output may be impressive, suggest that few, if any, major proposals were enacted in the same form as requested by the President. They also stress that, for the 88th Congress, 88 in the House and 28 in the Senate, the President should have had an even better batting average. They emphasized that, especially on domestic issues, the President fared badly with those matters which he said were so urgently needed in the 1960 presidential campaign.

WHILE the record of the 87th Congress, covering the first two years of the John Kennedy Administration, is mixed, there is no question that some of the major proposals set out by the President

D.C. JACLer awarded $150 for superior performance

WASHINGTON.—Emi Kamachi was awarded a Sustained Superior Performance Award at a ceremony at the Pentagon last month for her work as secretary in the office of the auditor general, U.S. Air Force Headquarters. A check for $150 came with the award. It was the second such award Miss Kamachi has won in the four years she has worked for the Air Force.

She has been a member of the Washington, D.C., JACL for 15 years. She has served as chapter secretary and is presently correspondence secretary of the Eastern District Council under council chairman John Yoshino. Miss Kamachi is originally from Seattle; she came to Washington in 1944 to work in the Federal service.

1,200,000 voters in State of Washington considering SJR 21

Cost State 63 cents each to distribute pamphlet

(Special to the Pacific Citizen)
SEATTLE.—With two solid weeks of time remaining to campaign, the Japanese American committee promoting passage of SJR 21 on Nov. 6 has stepped up its appeal to vote "Yes" on a proposed constitutional amendment removing restrictions on land ownership.

The State of Washington superintendent of elections, Ken Gilbert, reports pamphlets explaining the various issues on the ballot have been mailed to some 1,200,000 registered voters at the cost of $750,000.

Advertising began appearing in daily and weekly newspapers throughout the state explaining SJR 21 this past week. One-minute segments on radio and television referring to the audience to read the Voters' Pamphlet and to sign on two constitutional amendments (eight in all) each time is expected to cost over $68,000.

Tak Kubota, general chairman of the committee, reported the campaign is progressing "on schedule." Within the next two weeks, Mike Masaoka of the Washington Office is expected to assist the statewide campaign.

"The arguments 'for' SJR 21 in the voters' pamphlet (see the Oct. 12 PC) were prepared by Don Kraft of the Kraft, Ehring and Smith, the public relations firm responsible for the excellent PR campaign for the Seattle World's Fair closing this Sunday.

Call at Moses Lake
Bob Ward, public relations specialist for the committee, was in Moses Lake this past week, appearing before its city council for endorsement.

The Columbia Basin Herald, in its editorial for Oct. 10, said, "This alien law ought to go... The provision no longer is an effective legal handicap to the Japanese and Chinese aliens among us. Most of the residents of Japanese or Chinese ancestry in the Columbia Basin are either Americans by birth or by naturalization. But the law is an affront to them, an unfair legal slap at their national origin. In recognition of the place these fine people have taken in our state, and especially the role they are playing in helping to develop the Basin as a new agricultural empire, voters in the Basin counties can do their part to strike this unfair provision from the law by voting of SJR 21 on Nov. 6."

FLOAT STILL INTACT FOR 1963 COLUMBUS PARADE

DAYTON.—Dayton JACL regretted its inability to enter a float in the Columbus Day parade this year. The float had been designed by Dean Knutson and Frank Sato. Chapter president Jack Huntsberger tried every place in town to obtain a truck.

However, because of no-coverage of insurance, etc., the truck was not available in time. The float is still intact and ready to be used next year.

TRAGEDY OF MISSISSIPPI

A quick review of the tragic events in Mississippi has this much in clear evidence.

James Meredith has been registered and is attending classes at the Univ. of Mississippi. For a while, the campus had more soldiers than students.

And if Meredith should withdraw under intolerable social or physical pressure, other Negroes will be ready to take his place.

It was also clear that the State of Mississippi has failed in its attempt to defy Federal authority. Governor Barnett, who vowed to go to jail rather than see "Ole Miss" integrated, found himself obliged to yield to vastly superior forces and wisely backed down.

It must have been also clear to all concerned for months in advance that the Federal government would never permit the orders of the Federal courts to be defied by the Mississippi chief of state. As one TV commentator said: If President Kennedy couldn't stand up to Barnett, how could he ask the world to believe that he will stand up to Khrushchev?

Governor Barnett must have known his struggle in the name of the sovereign state of Mississippi was futile. This "front" has provided him worldwide publicity, although the entire episode was a measure of irresponsibility. Only the decisive act by the President in the imposition of Federal power at Oxford, Miss., on the night of Sept. 29-30 by federalizing the Mississippi National Guard to support law and order saved the day.

A war was waged to preserve the Federal union a 100 years ago. The cause for the Confederacy became a lost cause as a result. We are one nation with one national government. The orders of the national courts are to be obeyed if we are to remain a nation governed by laws rather than by the arbitrary will of men. The Mississippians don't have to like a court decision, but they must respect law and order. Anything less leads to chaos.

This lesson of the oneness of a nation being reiterated by the course of events in Mississippi, we must now point to the unfinished work in which we as a people are engaged. This work includes the integration of the Negro into American political and social life. Until it is accomplished, the nation's wounds shall not have been bound. Nor, in a world that is over three-fourths "colored", shall we have done everything possible to secure a just and lasting peace with all nations.

This leads us to review JACL philosophy and policy on this question.

At the Seattle National JACL Convention, delegates adopted the following recommendation as one of their "continuing responsibilities":

Civil and Human Rights—As the continuing struggle for civil and human rights and dignity for all Americans enters into what will be its final stages, the JACL should remain in the forefront of those organizations that have joined in the common cause—through legislation, courts and constructive action on the national, state and local levels—to secure equal opportunities and equal dignity for all our citizens without regard to race, color, creed, age or sex in every aspect of our national life.

The integration of schools should be accelerated; the desegregation of transportation, recreational, and other public facilities should be expedited;

And opportunities for equal employment promotions, for housing, for education, for dignified living, etc., should be made immediately available to all.

The JACL, while cooperating with others, should not ignore that Japanese American citizens too are discriminated in certain areas, particularly in housing and some employment, as well as promotions and upgrading once hired.

The Washington Representative (is) directed to participate fully in all efforts to secure civil and human rights for all Americans, before the Congress, through the courts, by administrative action, etc. Furthermore, he (is) to continue to participate in, and cooperate with, such organizations as the National Civil Liberties Clearing House, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, etc.

In addition, the various district councils and individual chapters should not only become aware of the civil rights problems in their respective areas but also deliberately participate with other like-minded organizations in the general effort to secure equal rights and opportunities for all Americans.

District councils and chapters too should conduct educational programs among their own membership to promote an understanding of civil rights problems and a will among JACLers to actively engage in helping to eliminate discrimination in all forms.

As one of the new responsibilities, JACL voted to accept leadership in the sensitive field of interracial marriages. For understandable reasons, other minority groups including the Negro have been reluctant to attempt to repeal or have anti-miscegenation laws invalidated.

According to JACL research, there are some 21 states that prohibit interracial marriages. California, Nevada and Idaho were among the few which have repealed their respective prohibitions in the past decade. There are 10 states which specifically prohibit marriages between white and Japanese: Georgia, Virginia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Maryland, Nebraska, Utah, Wyoming and Oklahoma.

TOKYO—A mass funeral for overseas tourists in Kyoto, the Reizan Kannon Shrine this past week received a deposit of earth from the Punchbowl, Honolulu's national cemetery for servicemen, which was brought by members of the Club 100 visiting here since Oct. 1.

There were 161 veterans of the famed 100th Infantry Battalion of the 442nd Central Postal Directory and their families there to witness the ceremony enshrining the Nisei war dead of World War II.

Reizan Kannon, built by Hiro-suke Ishikawa, president of the Teisan Auto Co., is dedicated to the WW 2 war dead of the Pacific. The Club 100 tourists also visited with Crown Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko. The royal couple were well acquainted with the heroes and heroines of the 100th Infantry, which gained fame in the Allied spearhead landings in Italy.

Scout Jamboree

As a result of the Asian Scout Jamboree at the foot of Mt. Fuji, a new phase of scout friendship has developed. Five Yokohama scouts have been invited by San Diego in a Sister City gesture and they have departed by ship, scheduled to arrive at the Border City by Nov. 13.

Three of them are scoutmasters and two are cubmasters. Denver plans to send some more scouts to Japan in 1964, though not during the Olympiad season. In fact, the Boy Scouts of Japan are not planning to host scouting groups during the Games because of the anticipated overcrowded conditions.

a joint resolution. Later, Senator Kuchel was able to add the identical language of the King No-Tax Bill to the 1962 tax revision measure during Senate debate, also on August 30.

Subsequently, House conferees, among them Congressman Kline, accepted the Senate No-Tax amendment as proposed by Senator Kuchel, and it was incorporated into the Conference Report on the tax revision legislation. Both the House and the Senate unanimously agreed to this Conference Report and the President this week signed this bill into law. Now, the Internal Revenue Service may not attempt to tax these awards.

IN THE civil rights field, a constitutional amendment outlawing the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting in federal elections was approved by both Houses and has been submitted to three-fourths of the States for ratification. The Senate shelved an Administrative proposal relating to literacy tests, also as a prerequisite to voting in federal elections.

After the President announced that he intended to appoint a Negro, Robert C. Weaver, Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, to be the new Cabinet Secretary for his requested Department of Urban Affairs, Congress rejected both legislative authority to establish this Cabinet Department and his executive order creating this new Department.

After "extended hearings" by a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee, Thurgood Marshall, former counsel to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was confirmed to the Federal Court of Appeals.

For the first time in 35 years, the Senate chose to vote for a two-thirds majority closure rule to end debate. Ironically perhaps, for the first time in many years this seldom-invoked parliamentary device was applied not to the usually "talkative" Southerners in a civil rights matter but to a little bloc of "liberals" filibustering against the President's communications satellite bill.

TWO MINOR immigration bills were also passed this past session. One, the Migration and Refugee Assistance Act of 1962, authorizes United States participation in two international programs to assist migrants and refugees, and particularly Cuban nationals now in this country.

The other, just passed on the "final day of the Second Session," relates the entry of first preference aliens, the admission of certain fourth preference aliens and their spouses and children, and the suspension of deportation of certain aliens.

While the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration and Naturalization conducted public hearings in September not on specific legislation but on the prospective consequences of increased immigration into the United States, the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on this same subject did not hold any public hearings on either public or private immigration bills.

AFTER CONSIDERING the matter of returning the private property vested from Germans and Japanese, national during and after World War II since enactment of the War Claims Act of 1948, in the final weeks of the Second Session, the Congress approved amendments to that statute that authorized the use of the liquidated proceeds of these sequestered assets to pay the remaining American personal and property damage war claims. To all intents and purposes, these remaining war claims will use all of the funds available from these confiscated properties. Accordingly, the return in the near future of this private property in money equivalents now appears very remote, if not impossible.

PC LETTERBOX:

On Negro Rights

Dear Editor:

I followed the National Convention held in Seattle recently with little more than a casual interest. It was reported as tremendously successful, best ever. All of this is well and good. However, it was a keen disappointment to me that nowhere was there ever a mention of JACL's position on the Negro issue: segregation, integration, disenfranchisement in some states through subterfuge or some conveniently arbitrary standard. It seems hardly possible that this subject should not have come up, or was it intentionally avoided? Why?

Whenever opportunity affords I have asked this question of JACL members and leaders, albeit on a casual basis. Answers have ranged from "it's none of our business" to "it's not politically expedient or politically practical to get involved." Political expediency, or practicality be damned!

Is our JACL cared nothing but hollow words? Is our memory so short that we have forgotten? Not so very long ago in our efforts to erase the stigma of a second class citizen, in our efforts to obtain naturalization privileges for our parents, we vociferously reminded the American public of the ideals of democracy, of the principles of justice and fair play. These were brave words. Where are they now? In our efforts we solicited and were grateful for whatever help we got regardless of where it came. Are we so callous now that we have our due we forget there are others who are denied theirs?

What is the JACL's official policy on this issue? If it has none, why not? If it is one where the subject is considered tabu—as one might suspect from the conspicuous evasion of the subject—why? Does it feel that it is no concern of ours? The membership is entitled to know!

Nisei Image

Dear Editor:

I don't think any of us has a clear-cut solution for curbing the rapid rise of juvenile delinquency among our Nisei-Sansai youth. However, I have been appalled with the things the older Nisei have said regarding the destruction of the Nisei "image" that has been built up by the hardworking Issei and the valiant Nisei of the 442nd Central Postal Team. Yes, it cannot be denied that this good image is being destroyed, but I feel the answer does not lie in challenging our youth to follow in the foot-steps of the heroes of the past.

Our Japanese American youth need to be aware of the rich heritage that is theirs, but this is not enough. They need the leadership of Nisei parents who can help them live in their world, not the world their parents grew up in during the 1930's and 40's. The Nisei parents of today are somewhat perplexed and perturbed because their children are destroying the "good name" that they worked so hard to gain. But I wonder whether there is a tinge of a selfish concern "to save face"?

What is needed, I feel, is understanding guidance from older Nisei. That is, people who will make an attempt to understand the young Nisei and Sansai and the world in which they live. For how is it possible to solve the problem of juvenile delinquency when we don't know what the problem is? The youth of today is confronted with a changed situation, a world that is uncertain and fast-moving. In many instances they discover that the values of their parents are no longer important in the environment in which they live, so new values are adopted and the "old" are dropped. The problem has been that among the "old" have been many things that are good and should be preserved.

Therefore, I feel there needs to be less talk about the Nisei "image" of the past and more understanding help so that the youth of today can build up an image of which he will be proud in his future world. In a few more years this will be the task of those of us that are still in the mid-20s. To all intents and purposes, the older Nisei leadership will make strong and wise strides toward helping the youth solve their current problems.

join our fellow citizens of goodwill in condemning any and all manifestations of sanctioned prejudice based on considerations of race, color, creed, or national origin. "Moreover, as members of the Japanese American Citizens League, an organization devoted primarily to the welfare of persons of Japanese ancestry in this country, we recognize our own responsibilities in these changing and challenging times to contribute to the fullest possible extent to the present crusade to secure added dignity and new opportunities for all Americans to share in the common lot and life of this nation, without distinction as to religious beliefs and ancestral affinities.

Mutual Efforts

"We, therefore, propose that the JACL within the limits of our resources and facilities, and mindful of the primary purpose of our organization, participate in the mutual effort to assure to all Americans equal treatment and consideration in and under the law, including the enactment of remedial and corrective legislation, and the filing, where and when appropriate, of briefs as friend of the court.

"Furthermore, cognizant of the fact that there are other organizations whose basic concerns are these problems of integration and segregation, and which have the specialized facilities and resources for these purposes, we urge JACL members who have a particular interest in these matters to join these associations and to make their special contributions through such individual memberships.

"We also condemn the use of violence and threats of violence to subvert the law of the land.

"Finally, aware of the need among all nationality and minority groups for a better understanding of the real nature of racial bigotry, we recommend that the various chapters and district councils of the JACL consider programs to stress the dangers of such prejudice."

(Policy statements embody the official views of JACL after due deliberations of delegates to the National Council, highest legislative body of the organization, for the guidance of its members as well as serving as a public declaration of pertinent issues.)

President Kennedy May Call

Seattle Ticket holders to a certain community dinner have a better than even chance to greet and hear President Kennedy this coming Sunday evening, the 21st, final day of Seattle's World's Fair.

The President will visit our fair city on that day—so much is definite. The dinner event which had been planned for several weeks now, is the fourth in a series of testimonials which began couple of years ago. The first was for Mayor Gordon S. Clinton, sponsored by what is called Seattle's International Community, represented by the Caucasian and four principal minority groups, the Japanese, Chinese, Negro and Filipino.

The second such International Community event was given for Governor Albert D. Rosellini during the 1960 election year. In all these occasions, JACLer Tak Kubota was or is prominent in arrangements, and the head table chores. It was on this occasion that former President Harry S. Truman dropped into town on short notice, and since the State's leading Democrat was busy at a citizen's appreciation dinner and could not meet the former President at the airport, good ol' Give 'em Harry came down to our Chinatown Restaurant, Gim Ling's to greet everyone.

The third event was Japanese community sponsored, and for Senator Warren G. Magnuson, as PC readers may recall. It was held at the Chamber of Commerce and quite an affair, for when the Japanese community holds a 25th anniversary appreciation for Senator "Maggie" and all his outstanding services to Japanese in general, party lines are forgotten.

To Councilman Wing Luke goes the credit for dreaming up this cordial Sunday's affair—an International Community appreciation for Senator Magnuson, again at Gim Ling's in newly decorated, booming Chinatown. Tak Kubota is once more heading all arrangements, and the City Councilman has been selected to emcee.

And here the situation parallels the Governor Rosellini dinner and the Truman visit. We are assured by a top spokesman of the Magnuson staff that arrangements are being made and it is a practical certainty that we will be honored by a presidential visit. Maybe such a visit to this interracial gathering makes sense public relations-wise but anyhow, we're all excited about it. And here's hoping that by the time the PC reaches Seattle next Monday, we won't be hiding out in some shelter wiping the egg off our chins.

RECOMMENDATION

From the camp of the other Washington Senator, Henry M. Jackson, comes an interesting comment. About a year ago, JACL at the local and national levels, Cathay Post and the local Nisei Vets all got behind former Seattleite Harry Takagi in recommending him for the Veterans Board of Appeals honorary job. During a recent conversation in Seattle, Senator Jackson's legislative director, Sterling Monroe remarked that Harry Takagi is doing a great job in Washington, and added: "You fellows sure know how to recommend good people."

MATSUTAKE SEASON

Mike Masaoka will be making another important visit to the Northwest this coming week, where we have two extra crucial legislative measures in the kettle. SJR 1 in Idaho, the repeal of the no votes-jury-or office for naturalized Mongolians will occupy several of Mike's days in Idaho, and from the 25th, he'll be at Tacoma (Puyallup Valley Chapter) and in the rest of this charmed land of western Washington, on SJR 21 business, and just in time for the matsutake season too.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE STUDY

IN GRADE SCHOOLS HIT
SACRAMENTO—The new law requiring compulsory foreign languages for 6th, 7th and 8th grade students beginning in 1965 was described as unworkable by the State Dept. of Education this past week and recommended a complete overhaul.

The biggest drawback, according to the Dept. of Education, is expected to be in finding enough teachers.

Los Angeles NEWSLETTER

$15 Bid for Box Lunch

The East Los Angeles JACL had its annual box lunch social recently at the International Institute. Although the committee didn't receive any RSVP response from the 30-couple affair, the cozy group, talking of old times and renewing acquaintances.

The delight was all ours, too, because the kind of music Frank Okamoto provided with his Hi-Fi was "out of this world" for the middle-ager.

We chatted with Sam and Mattie Furuta, jawed a bit with Akira Hasegawa and had pleasant conversations with active JACLers like Mary Mittler, Hiro Omura and Roy Yamadera.

There was Jim Higashi, your So. Calif. regional director who bided $15 to share dinner with Lillian Seki, 1962 East Los Angeles queen attendant for the 22nd annual Nisei Week Festival.

Sam, who was the auctioneer, extended us the courtesy of dancing the first one with Lillian who is now working at Jim's office in the Pacific Citizen circulation department.

Needless to say that when there was a nostalgic number recalling the relocation camp dances, attractive Lillian would just say: Oh, is that so, the number was popular then?

Let's face it, bud, you live in another generation.

Yamadera—who is believed to have served the longest time as East Los Angeles chapter president since the war, pushed Higashi in the bidding to soar it up to $15. We have been told that several years ago, fellows used to pay as high as $30 to get a couple of home-cooked dinners and share it with the girl who did the honors. Mr. Higashi said it was one of his "very rare, home-cooked dinners" he had in a long while and "it tasted wonderful." That's what happens, Jim when you're a bachelor too long.

Our confession is that almost as dry as the Dodgers were in late September when they couldn't score in some 36 innings, we danced more than our usual number, thanks to the "slow, old time music." There are many, spy people like Sam and Mattie and Akira and Roy who may be able to do the latest—they probably pay good money to learn—we've just about hung up our spikes as far as tip-toeing around the ballroom is concerned. Too hard on the equilibrium.

SONOMA COUNTY JACL

PLANS TO INCORPORATE

SANTA ROSA — The Sonoma County JACL is planning to be incorporated as a non-profit organization under the laws of California. Attorney Mas Yone-mura of Oakland is assisting in the draft of the articles of incorporation.

The chapter board will meet on Oct. 26 to discuss the necessary revisions to the chapter constitution as well as other calendar items for the remainder of the year, according to James Murakami, chapter president.

WHY SHOULD I JOIN THE JACL?

Every JACL member who has ever gone on a house-to-house membership drive is invariably plagued with the question, "Why should I join the JACL?"

I believe that the Special Membership Issue of the PACIFIC CITIZEN (Nov. 2) will adequately answer this question.

Now that the 1963 Membership Drive is gaining momentum, local chapters may want to secure extra copies of this Special Membership Issue for distribution to prospects. As a service to our local chapters and to the National JACL, we are making extra copies available at the bulk rate cost of nine dollars per one thousand copies plus mailing costs. Order from the PACIFIC CITIZEN now.

From the Frying Pan

AT HOME IN AMERICA—For most Nisei, it seems, the fact of their acceptance into the American life stream has become so commonplace that it is seldom worthy of notice. Today Nisei live and succeed and sometimes fail and die like other Americans, and most of the time their racial origins are not relevant to their story as individuals.

But to non-Nisei, apparently the fact of race is still pertinent to the record of their postwar success, as witness a lengthy item released this week by the Associated Press for publication Sunday, Oct. 21. The story was written by Leif Erickson, chief of the AP's San Francisco bureau, formerly of the Honolulu bureau, and correspondent in the Pacific during World War II, and during the Korean war.

In an editor's note preceding the story, the Associated Press observes: "The black clouds of Oxford, Miss., obscure a brighter moment in the U.S. race relations. Only 20 years ago Japanese Americans were penned in barbed wire camps as potential spies. Today they've blended into the American landscape so well they're raising money for scholars to find out how it happened so fast."

Just 20 years ago, Erickson writes, Japanese Americans were making their exodus from their homes to war relocation centers. "From that time of despair and hurt the Japanese Americans have scored a remarkably swift and sweeping triumph over racial prejudice and achieved notable economic success as well." Erickson quotes Leonard Broom, chairman of the sociology department at the University of Texas on the Nisei comeback: "An achievement perhaps rarely equalled in the history of migration."

PARADOX—Erickson says "the enforced exodus paradoxically turned into greater acceptance (for the Nisei) into American life than ever before. The opportunities that have opened to the Japanese range from the race track to research laboratories, from architecture to law."

He names George Taniguchi ("he now grosses $75,000 a year") as the race track jockey. Kiyo Tomiyasu, technical director of General Electric's research in lasers, is the scientist. Minoru Yamasaki, of course, is the architect, and Judge John Aiso is the jurist.

A high percentage of the Nisei, Erickson continues, "has gone into teaching, research, and academic scholarship. The Issei willingly sacrificed their own living standard to achieve their most highly prized status symbol—academic degrees for their children."

HISTORY PROJECT—Erickson asks: "Why and how was this country's deep-seated anti-Japanese prejudice so quickly overcome?" He answers it only in part—the heroic combat record of Nisei soldiers, plus hindsight judgment which stirred a "sense of guilt in the nation".

A more thorough answer, he indicates, may be found in the project at the University of California at Los Angeles "to document and analyze the complex currents of history that so quickly swept away barriers of discrimination imbedded in national and state laws as well as human attitudes."

"The study," Erickson notes, "originated with the Japanese Americans themselves whose Japanese American Citizens League raised over $100,000 toward financing the project."

Erickson adds that there are still reminders of an earlier time: "Idaho voters will ballot on repeal of a section of the state constitution next month. Still in full effect, the Idaho law declares: 'Chinese or persons of Mongolian descent not born in the United States can neither vote, serve as jurors, or hold any civil office'."

Fleecing fake pilot cynosure of Hawaii's Japanese

BY ALLAN BEEKMAN

Honolulu
One day Shinichi Oshima, Honolulu branch manager for Japan Air Lines, took a guest to a bar. Informed of his identity, a pretty cocktail waitress asked if he knew of one Ken Yamamoto, a JAL jet pilot who earned $1,500 a month and was vacationing in Honolulu. Mr. Oshima knew of no such person. He pointed out that the situation she described seemed suspicious. He cautioned her to be on guard.

The waitress, Mrs. Tamako Kingsley, seemed mortified. "Then I've been fooled by that young buck."

The person to whom she referred is Eiji Miura, currently in the news here.

One night Miura had wandered into the bar where Mrs. Kingsley was employed. He knows little English. It seems natural that he should have struck up an acquaintance with this fellow expatriate.

Mrs. Kingsley, 32, who came to America 11 years ago, says she was born in Mito, Japan. She came to Hawaii last year, after separating from her husband.

Miura, 27, evidently went to California from Japan in 1956. He worked on farms around Watsonville and Salinas. He also says he worked for a month for the Kashi Mainichi newspaper. He came to Hawaii, where he has relatives, in December 1961.

According to Mrs. Kingsley, when she informed him that Oshima denied knowledge of him, Miura immediately picked up a phone and dialed a number. He shouted into the instrument.

"Hey, this is Pilot Yamamoto. Call Oshima's wife. Oshima are you five or six hundred a month—trying to stir up trouble between my girl and me—a pilot getting 1500 a month! I know Pres. Kawashima well. As soon as I get back to Tokyo, I'll tell him to fire you."

Misadventures Compounded
The Hawaii Times has been featuring the misadventures of Miura and Mrs. Kingsley in its Japanese language section. In an interview with the Times of her own seeking, Mrs. Kingsley says she believes her troubles started when she confided to Miura that she had lent $1,000 to Mr. A, an engineer at Pearl Harbor, for the hospital expenses of his wife. Somehow Miura associated Mr. A with the biggest and most brazen daylight holdup ever committed in Honolulu, which occurred soon after the arrival of Miura in Hawaii.

As he came from a bank in the heart of Waikiki at 3 p.m., January 5, 1962, Shizuo Katano, 37, a hotel accountant, was murdered and robbed of $19,500. Although the crime was committed on a crowded street and there were many witnesses, it has never been solved.

After learning about Mr. A, Miura went through the motions of calling up a fellow pilot and informing him that Mr. A seemed to have connections with the Katano case. "My cousin is a lawyer," Miura said, "and he is going to put A into jail."

She also said he pretended to threaten Mr. A by phone. It is hard to understand how he might have done so, since Mr. A is a Caucasian who presumably does not understand Japanese.

Nevertheless, his telephone technique, in which he used "skillful gestures," was impressive. He won her credulity and fired her imagination.

He told her, "A's henchmen are after your life, but I'll risk my life to protect you. I love you truly from my heart. If death comes, we'll die together."

Woman's Weak Point
This expression of selfless devotion went home to her "woman's weak point." Deeply touched, she permitted him to share her apartment.

Cohabitation increased her weakness. In order to devote himself to the task of protecting her, it was necessary to take a whole year off from his job of jet pilot. He needed $130 security money. She advanced it. He also needed spending money. She provided that, too.

"I also bought him suits, shoes, socks, shirts, handkerchiefs, everything. And for meals I used my money."

It was necessary for him to make long distance calls to protect her from A's henchmen. The phone bill went up to $75.

The Japanese language papers were publishing the activities of Miura. People said he wrote bad checks. He was accused of borrowing money by trading on the sympathy of people, including the aged who were dependent on social security pensions—money which he did not repay. He owed $30 to a florist, to whom he had represented the purchase as that of JAL. He owed $150 to a barber shop, $760 to a finance company from whom he had borrowed under an alias. He had taken a car to test drive, borrowing $20 from the salesman during the transaction, and had returned neither money nor car. Creditors, police, and immigration authorities were looking for him.

The circumstances were such as to dent even Miura's aplomb. After about a week of residence in Mrs. Kingsley's apartment, he told her that A's henchmen were after them day and night. He went through the motions of putting through a phone call to his cousin, the lawyer.

"You still feel it's better to flee to Maui! One o'clock at night? Oh, two o'clock! All right."

He rushed her to pack her belongings. Under cover of darkness, with all they could carry in their suitcases, they fled the apartment.

Hustles Off to Maui
As they emerged from the building, they met the usual sight, at such an hour, of cars parked around the apartment house. He seized upon this phenomenon to bolster his case.

"Look there! You see all those parked cars! All ordered by my cousin. All plain-clothesmen to protect us. Don't use light or flashlight. Into the car, quick!"

She had tricked him into going to Maui, and he was not the only man in her life. In addition to Mr. A, there was the friend who had gone to Maui and brought her back. There was also a 62-year-old who lived at Waikiki and had shown up the day after the Katano murder with a roll of $100 bills, and then had gone into hiding for a week.

After police investigation, Miura called Station KOHO and arranged to go on the air to gratify his large public, avid for news of him. The interview was such a success it was rebroadcast in response to popular demand.

The following day, from a bed in Queen's Hospital, where he was being treated for constipation, Miura phoned Reporter Tsushima, requesting another interview, Tsushima obliged.

As this is being written, Miura is still hot copy. The Times is wondering whether he is a megalomaniac or publicity mad. Of course, they surmise, he could also be a master liar or mentally retarded.

At any rate, they have concluded, he is a nuisance.

This past week, the Oahu grand jury indicted Eiji Miura, 27, unemployed, on charges of forgery. It was the old story again: give a man enough rope and he'll hang himself with it.

Orange County lad knifed in fisticuffs

BUENA PARK.—A Nisei was injured from stab wounds as a result of fights which broke out on the night of Oct. 5 at American Legion Hall, where about 150 persons congregated for a wedding reception.

Victor Okabe, 22, of 6762 Burnham, Buena Park, was reportedly first fighting Jacob Rodney, Jr., of 1325 W. Second, Santa Ana, in one of several fights which broke out at 8071 Whitaker St.

Okabe was given emergency treatment at Orange County General Hospital for a knife wound about 1 1/2 inches long in his mid-section. About 10 stitches were required, police said.

Officers said Okabe's knife attacker could not be located. They booked Rodney, one of two held, who also suffered a cut ear.

Chuman supports Prop. 1-A to assist UCLA construction
LOS ANGELES.—Frank F. Chuman, past national JACL president endorsed Proposition 1A on the November ballot as "a measure necessary to continue California's policy of making higher education available to all qualified students."

Pointing out that 80 per cent of the $270 million bond issue is committed to college and university construction, Chuman declared, "The rapid population growth in California must be matched by new educational facilities in order to maintain our present level of student admissions to college in the state."

Chuman is particularly acquainted with UCLA as a graduate of that institution and as a principle figure in the establishment of the Japanese American research project at the University earlier this year.

Purpose of the research project, which is co-directed by Dr. T. Scott Miyakawa and Dr. Robert Wilson, is to produce a definitive history of the Japanese in the United States during the century between 1880 and 1960.

LOS ANGELES.—Democratic attorney Frank Chuman and Republican Goro Nakamura were appointed by Governor Brown to co-chair the So. Calif. Japanese American Citizens Committee to Re-Elect Governor Brown.

"This is a bipartisan committee and I know that they will carry the record of this administration to the Japanese American community," the Governor commented.

TEENAGE RIOT AT WLA HOUSE PARTY
LOS ANGELES.—Twenty-six teenagers were in trouble early this week after a West Los Angeles house party Saturday night turned into a riot in which 12 were injured.

Police who answered the major riot call arrested the 26 youths early Sunday at 1940 Stoner Ave., where they said Frank Kishi, 18, was giving a party for about 25 invited guests. About twice that number showed up.

Despite the gate-crashers, the party went peacefully until two guests shed their shirts and challenged one and all, Kishi told the officers. Then out came tire irons, jackhammers, knives and razors.

The injured youths were treated at UCLA Medical Center.

(KNTX, CBS television outlet, termed it one of the worst "racial teenage riots" and made it a point that this was the first time Japanese American youths were involved there. In its two-minute segment, pictures included were of obviously Nisei youth hiding their faces at the police station.)

Woman's Weak Point

This expression of selfless devotion went home to her "woman's weak point." Deeply touched, she permitted him to share her apartment.

Cohabitation increased her weakness. In order to devote himself to the task of protecting her, it was necessary to take a whole year off from his job of jet pilot. He needed $130 security money. She advanced it. He also needed spending money. She provided that, too.

"I also bought him suits, shoes, socks, shirts, handkerchiefs, everything. And for meals I used my money."

It was necessary for him to make long distance calls to protect her from A's henchmen. The phone bill went up to $75.

The Japanese language papers were publishing the activities of Miura. People said he wrote bad checks. He was accused of borrowing money by trading on the sympathy of people, including the aged who were dependent on social security pensions—money which he did not repay. He owed $30 to a florist, to whom he had represented the purchase as that of JAL. He owed $150 to a barber shop, $760 to a finance company from whom he had borrowed under an alias. He had taken a car to test drive, borrowing $20 from the salesman during the transaction, and had returned neither money nor car. Creditors, police, and immigration authorities were looking for him.

The circumstances were such as to dent even Miura's aplomb. After about a week of residence in Mrs. Kingsley's apartment, he told her that A's henchmen were after them day and night. He went through the motions of putting through a phone call to his cousin, the lawyer.

"You still feel it's better to flee to Maui! One o'clock at night? Oh, two o'clock! All right."

He rushed her to pack her belongings. Under cover of darkness, with all they could carry in their suitcases, they fled the apartment.

Hustles Off to Maui
As they emerged from the building, they met the usual sight, at such an hour, of cars parked around the apartment house. He seized upon this phenomenon to bolster his case.

"Look there! You see all those parked cars! All ordered by my cousin. All plain-clothesmen to protect us. Don't use light or flashlight. Into the car, quick!"

She had tricked him into going to Maui, and he was not the only man in her life. In addition to Mr. A, there was the friend who had gone to Maui and brought her back. There was also a 62-year-old who lived at Waikiki and had shown up the day after the Katano murder with a roll of $100 bills, and then had gone into hiding for a week.

After police investigation, Miura called Station KOHO and arranged to go on the air to gratify his large public, avid for news of him. The interview was such a success it was rebroadcast in response to popular demand.

The following day, from a bed in Queen's Hospital, where he was being treated for constipation, Miura phoned Reporter Tsushima, requesting another interview, Tsushima obliged.

As this is being written, Miura is still hot copy. The Times is wondering whether he is a megalomaniac or publicity mad. Of course, they surmise, he could also be a master liar or mentally retarded.

At any rate, they have concluded, he is a nuisance.

This past week, the Oahu grand jury indicted Eiji Miura, 27, unemployed, on charges of forgery. It was the old story again: give a man enough rope and he'll hang himself with it.

PC BOARD MEMBER BECOMES 3RD NISEI TO HEAD FLORAL GROUP
OAKLAND.—Arthur T. Ito of Los Angeles was elected president of the California State Florist Assn. at the annual convention of the group.

The three-day convention was held Sept. 28-30 at the Edgewater Inn. Some 400 persons attended the final banquet with some 300 registered and about 20 per cent of those present were Nisei.

The association is strongly supported by the flower growers and Ito is the third Nisei to serve as president of the state association in the 14 year history of the group.

The other Nisei ex-presidents are both also from Los Angeles, Joseph Shinoda of San Lorenzo Nursery and Frank Kuwahara, general manager of the Southern California Flower Market.

Ito, 1000 Clubber, Hollywood JACL, is a member of the Pacific Citizen Board.

Zenimura candidate for Fresno 'Hall of Fame'
FRESNO.—Coach Ken Zenimura was among 100 candidates being considered by a committee to select five or six persons to receive the Fresno County Athletic Hall of Fame awards at a dinner Nov. 14 at the Sunnyside Country Club. Though best known as a baseball player and coach, Zenimura was listed with a number of others in the "general" classification.

Fresno may be site of AAU judo meet

FRESNO.—Fresno appears to have the "inside track" for hosting the 1963 National AAU judo championships, an honor judo instructor Yoshitaka Yamauchi has long sought.

Dr. Jerry Young of Fresno, who would be co-chairman with active Clovis JACLer Hifumi Ikeda, said there was a 99 per cent chance Fresno would get the bid.

The championships would be sponsored by the Central California Judo Black Belt Assn., of which Tom Nagamatsu, another active JACLer from Sanger, is president.

SWLA TO SPLIT

Another new chapter in the Pacific Southwest District Council might be formed as a result of the special meeting being held at the St. Mary's Episcopal Church, next Wednesday, Oct. 24, 8 p.m. The meeting is to be chaired by Mas Shimatsu, Special Events VP of the Southwest Los Angeles JACL, follows recommendations made by the SWLA Board of Governors.

Realizing the tremendous growth of the Southwest area, the Board voted to endorse the PSWDC recommendations. The district council appointed Aki Onno of West Los Angeles as chairman of the new chapter development committee. However the consensus of opinion was that a new chapter in the Uptown-Wilshire Los Angeles area was the most practical measure that could be taken NOW, with formation of additional chapters to be considered after the successful activation of an Uptown chapter.

The proposed new chapter will in general cover the area bounded by Figueroa St. on the east, La Cienega on the west and using Washington Blvd. as the north-south dividing line with the Southwest Los Angeles Chapter. Letters have been sent to the 1961-1962 SWLA members residing in the area calling attention to the importance of a new chapter in terms of programming, communications and coordination as a local JACL Chapter.

SANTA MARIA VALLEY

JACL Japanese History Project fund drive in Santa Maria Valley will be underway very shortly. Had the pleasure of meeting over the weekend some of the prominent community leaders of the Santa Maria-Guadalupe area: the Minamis, Koyamas, Tomookas and the Furukawas. Special thanks to Ray Koyama and Isamu Minami for their assistance in setting up the special fund drive committee meeting Saturday night at the Santa Maria Community Center. The important work of the History Project fund drive will be started by Bill Kahiwaig, the Rev. Arthur Yamabe of the Guadalupe Buddhist Church, Harold Shimizu and George Utsunomiya. The plans call for the simultaneous mailing of brochures and letters and personal contact with those who have already indicated wholehearted support of the JACL Japanese History Project. Surprising results can be expected from this area.

NEW NEIGHBORS

Just like the old days at the Miyako Hotel when the JACL and the Japanese Chamber of Commerce used to be neighbors on the same floor, we have learned that

Sequoia JACL fireworks sale project nets $800

REDWOOD CITY.—The Sequoia JACL reported this week that the chapter's fireworks sale project this summer was "a great success" with a net profit of over $800.

Hiroji Kariya, chairman for the sales project, reported that Goro Kuwano and Kiyo Nishiura won prizes for presales in an advance sale campaign directed by Kei Nakano.

Next NC-WN meet at Marysville deals with election, quota

Quarterly session slated for Nov. 18

SAN FRANCISCO.—The fourth quarterly meeting of the Northern California Western Nevada JACL District Council will be held in Marysville on Sunday, Nov. 18 and plans are now being made for the event by the host chapter officials. The first Sunday in November is the usual date for the final council meeting of the year, but it was skipped as it will be the second K.O. Polio Sunday.

The host Marysville chapter requested that the district meeting be held on the third Sunday because of a conflicting local activity on Nov. 11.

The district executive board, headed by Haruo Ishimaru of San Mateo, will meet with Marysville chapter officials on Sunday, Oct. 21 to discuss plans for this final 1962 meeting.

Election of five new members to the district board, election of new district cabinet officers and acceptance of a budget quota formula for 1963 will be on the agenda for the Nov. 18 session.

Delegates from 25 chapters will decide whether a great increase is to be made on the present percentage or on a new formula.

Downlow L.A. to host PSW Nov. 11

LOS ANGELES.—The Downtown Los Angeles JACL, hosting the final quarterly session of the Pacific Southwest District Council, announced the meeting would be held at the Statler Hilton Hotel on Sunday, Nov. 11.

Dayton to elect new officers in October

DAYTON.—Coming weeks this early fall are busy ones for Dayton JACLers, according to Jack Huntsberger, chapter president, who disclosed the election meeting is being combined with the chapter Hallowe'en party tentatively scheduled for Oct. 21 at the YWCA.

Membership would be notified by the telephone committee if the election date is changed.

Roy Sugimoto, nominations committee chairman, will announce the slate, which is vying for four vacancies, now that the two-year terms are about to expire for Paula Kubo, Capt. Yosh Yoshida, Dean Knutson and Huntsberger.

The chapter will also participate again with a booth at the YWCA World's Fair on Tuesday, Nov. 13. Mrs. Yasue Redden will be chairman of what has been described as a "worthwhile P.R. endeavor."

At its last board meeting, the chapter voted to contribute $25 toward the Idaho SJR 1 campaign. Lois Toyama was named PC Holiday Issue chairman.

Youth Speaks:

Report on Citizenship Conference

BY DAVID HARA

San Francisco
Thanks to the hard work and planning of Mr. Thomas Rowe, Executive Director of the San Francisco Youth Association and Mr. Masao Satow of the National JACL, I was fortunate enough to be able to attend the National Conference on Citizenship on behalf of the SFYA and the JACL. I would also like to thank the various organizations that contributed in making this trip possible. I had a wonderful time and found the conference and the people quite interesting.

After a five-hour ride on a jet, I was very happy to see the faces of the JACL youth group that met me! I was taken to the Statler Hotel where I checked in and then attended a dinner given for me by the JACL chapter in Washington. It was a very friendly atmosphere and I enjoyed meeting everyone. Later that evening I joined the youth group in bowling.

Monday was the first real day of the conference and a very long one. The program started with the opening ceremony which included the presentation of the state flag and the introduction of representatives of each of the thirteen states. This was followed by the keynote address given by Deputy Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach, "What Can I Do for My Country in a Changing World?"

Rain Changes Program

The afternoon program which included the laying of wreaths of the graves of the signatories of the Constitution was originally planned to be at the Washington Monument, but because of rain it was held in the hotel.

In the evening we were entertained by the U.S. Navy Band in a concert most of us will never forget. It was called "The Bigger
