FREE-WHEELING DIALOGUE

No other National JACL group can hope to have the kind of line-up the current Planning Commission ful to the Convention visithas with most of the next National JACL executive committee on board. While this is assuming these particular people will be elected, present were presidentelect Henry Tanaka and James Murakami, vice-president on research & services who is seeking a second term, as ex-officio members; and candidates Shig Sugiyama for president-elect, Frank Iwama for vice-president on general operations, and Dr. Otto Furuta for ring the Convention. Ira Shivice-president on public affairs.

The 20-hour session, much of it free-wheeling dialogue on where JACL is at today and where it ought tionally known military lead- buy space in the souvenir to go, proved to be a training ground for these aspirants for National JACL elective offices

Assisting them were other members of the commission: Joe Nishioka, onetime IDC governor; Hiro Kusakai, onetime CCDC governor; Dave Takashima and Jim Matsuoka, representing the young adult point of view; Dr. Jim Tsujimura, who will be chairing the 1974 National JACL Convention in Portland; Kaz Oshiki, administrative assistant to Rep. Kastenmeier (D-Wis.), who was subbing for Bill Marutani, convalescing at home from major surgery; commission chairman Tom Shimasaki, veteran JACLer whose service in the organization dates back into the 1930s; Mas Satow and Jeffrey Matsui of the JACL staff. And your truly with his tape recorder.

There was an awesome agenda before the commission when it reconvened in San Francisco over the March 24-26 weekend but commission chairman Tom sagaciously let the free-wheeling dialogue prevail. ## Are we free from job discrimination?

Washington, D.C. A young Sansei college graduate had spent another frustrating day looking for a job. With a bachelor's degree and teaching certificate backed up with solid recommendations from her professors, excellent student teaching credentials, superior grades throughout college, and a charming personality to which third grade children readily respond, this Sansei repeatedly received assurances from both educators and professors that she would have little trouble in obtaining a teaching position in the various school systems. Even with the oversupply of elementary teachers flooding the market, she appeared to be the most likely to be employed among her graduating peers.

The employment picture was a little tighter than she had expected as she went from school to school, district to district, interview to interview. No concrete job offer emerged, only "We'll call you if we need someone." "You seem to be highly qualified and we'll certainly keep you in mind."

She had a tremendous desire to use the knowledge and skill that she had obtained in college so she persistently inquired into every possibility to teach school. After many weeks with no luck and less encouragement, this Sansei girl decided to return to her former job as a secretary. Her boss was happy to have her back although her college degree did little to increase her wages even though her experience and dependability far exceeded the pay she received.

From time to time she heard of vacancies arising in various schools and districts where she had applied so she visited the personnel director in each case only to be told "I'm sorry, you were certainly considered but we have already filled the position."

It was only after many rejections that she began to inquire as to who had been hired to teach in these schools. To her surprise, in four out of five cases the person that had been hired was a classmate of this young lady. And in all four cases they had not attained the high degree of excellence or competency that this Sansei had attained. Her grades, her recommendations, her student teaching evaluation, and her overall performance all excelled the records and abilities of those that received the job.

Not one to cause a scene, this young Sansei did not immediately complain to the school districts. She had never faced discrimination before on any grounds; her family was well respected in the community; her outlook on life was one of acceptance into the mainstream of society.

She began to see a pattern. Those of her graduating peers who received teaching positions did not have the credentials that she had yet they were hired before she was hired. The only excuse the personnel director gave to her was that other equally competent people had been hired. The one difference other than competency (which appeared to make little difference) was that she was of Japanese ancestry.

Immediate reaction was one of skepticism. "I am an American who happens to be of Japanese ancestry. I speak English. I've never been to Japan. I have grown up in this city. I have never felt that I have been discriminated against by hakujins. Yet now it appears that I am a victim of a subtle type of racial discrimina-

This young lady who rarely raised a fuss about anything began to inquire among other Sansei college graduates in the area. Many of them indicated that they were experiencing the same problems. Many of the young Sansei males were forced to take lower paying starting jobs in their professions while less qualied acuquaintances entered at a higher level with more pay even though both the Sansei and his peers were interviewed for the same job.

They talked to their parents who knew quite a bit about racial discrimination. They, too, were surprised. Some of them mentioned that they had suffered job discrimination over the years, have seen countless employees being promoted ahead of them even though they had better performance records, more experience, as well as seniority. Ironically, many of those who have moved ahead of the Nisei parents were members of other minority groups.

Some of the Nisei parents strongly stated, "We flattened land somehow forced my thoughts back to that day have suffered all our lives. We have endured job discrimination based on race. We have seen many less panese accented speech. But qualified men reach high management and executive most of all there was con- positions when we knew that by all rights the position should have been ours. SECURITY THROUGH WHAT?-Anyone who has been following the news through the columns of the Pacific Citizen can be excused for wondering whether the slogan that appears on the National JACL membership pin hasn't become something of a mockery. That slogan, which you may have forgotten, is: "Security Through Unity".

That slogan had a good, reassuring ring to it in the long ago when the Nisei, young and inexperienced, felt a need to close ranks and fend off the barbs of an unfriendly outer world. But now, apparently, the ciety is difficult enough, but Nisei and their heirs feel secure enough to ignore for non-white minorities in unity on occasion and go off on their individual tan- America, the task is even gents. Such episodes caused Mike Iwatsubo, editing the March issue of the Fresno JACL chapter's newsletter, mental health of the individto suggest waggishly this new slogan for the national organization: "We may not think alike, but we do whatever his assets or shortlook alike."

Like almost everything else these days, Iwatsubo's dignity as a human being is attempt at humor can be expected to stir controversy. Those who still enjoy a sense of humor will chuckle. But those whose nerve ends are raw about the matter of stereotypes will be outraged. I think Iwatsubo's tries to destroy it. It says, Dec. 27, 1969 when I parti- dred miles to celebrate this but Japanese language newssuggestion has just enough truth in it to be funny, and if that be insensitivity, then make the most of it.

One of the sad things about these times is that we as Americans, and as Nisei in particular, have forgotten how to laugh at ourselves. True there isn't a great curity, many Japanese Amerdeal to laugh about, but certainly somewhere in the icans will seek to be white forest of grim and serious issues there is a place for by adopting white middle lightness and levity.

If You Can't Buy Happiness, Rent It. From Auto-Ready

Happiness, according to experts in the field, is a new car. For a day or a weekend, a week or longer. But don't take word of the professional pleasure seekers. Find out for yourself. Find your way to Auto-Ready at our convenient downtown location, and pick out a shiny, new, reliable auto. Then find out how foolishly low Auto-Ready's rates are. Find out what real personal service and attention is. Then air conditioning and other happiness features. Now you've found yourwaiting to get out of you as soon as you got into a new car. You may like being happy so much, next time you'll want to lease a new car. Well, Auto-Ready is read/ when you are.
