in me: I love objects.

Probably more than I should.
I take sensual input very seriously, so when a thing has a good weight, or texture — nice to use, that is good.

But there's something else too, something I can only describe as a spiritual dimension.
I AM NOT SPIRITUAL but do I think of myself as superstitious, etc. God. I worry. and not at the reasonable dangers like car accidents or cancer. Although I worry at those too, I worry about what could only be history of intrusive thoughts.

I don't think that if I leave the house / get a certain number from the house who my hat, or my pen, or a whole book / shirt that the world will end, or that my family will die, but it does feel wrong.

I do not believe in God, but I have a coin for Charon.

I don't believe in hell or an after life, but I do believe in death. In the sea.

In cold stones heated by the sun.

I believe in steel nibs & knife blades, not blood, cobalt, ^{highly conductive} ink and blood, cobalt and indigo.

I love the motif of skulls but real skeletons unsettle me. I believe there is some right way for things to be, but that perfection is unattainable. That order can be divined by evidence, that by close examination and of self, environment, cause, and effect, a workable system can be divined for my inconvenience

I believe people should have six fingers instead of five, as 6 is a more beautiful number and 10 fingers (thumbs) would feel left out, but that for the world we live in divisions of ten make the most sense.

I have been plagued lately with the idea of a little shed. No amount of articles about how neil gaiman's little shed didn't make him a better writer can dissuade me from dreaming of using money I don't have to buy a cabin I don't want to drive to to write words no one wants. To isolate myself from the only thing that I've even shown any skill at or found any real social power in, the internet, and live like a hermit on a magazine witter from an era so far bygone it's almost parodic. I dream of only being reachable by landline or certifeid mail as if now I am overrun by manic hordes of fans and admirers demanding things from me. I dream of using this typewriter and sending the pages to a secretary somewhere from my little room, like EB White, at the end of the yard on the edge of the lake, the sea, etc. I dream of construction, 2x4's, caulk. I dream of my old yard in alaska, 8 acres of shifting mud and bramble populated by moose and penned in by hicks, and how creative I could be in pure communitative isolation. I fogget, I guess, that I have made more interesting things in this more interactive part of my life than I ever did then. No-one is banging down the gates for more Dr. Zachary Smith.
