GOVERNMENT to abolish Income Tax

Mrs Thatcher last night announced that Mr Kerry Packer, the Australian businessman, is to be granted exclusive rights to the televising of Parliament and control of all future television channels in return for a sum thought to be around £2 billion a year. The Prime Minister pledged that the revenue would enable the Government to abolish income tax.

Mr. Packer's £2bn deal

By Our Own Reporter

In an historic and unprecedented announcement from Downing Street last night, the Prime Minister, Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, declared that as a result of a deal made with Mr. K. P. B. ("Kerry") Packer, the Australian philanthro-bilian a year, Mr. Packer will be granted exclusive rights to televise Parliament, and will be given control of the fourth and all subsequent television channels. Parliamentary transmissions will fill in time between advertisements.

Margaret Thatcher and Kerry Packer will be seen in a new commercial dimension. Our skills and heritage, allied to Kerry's youthful energy and entrepreneurial buoyance, will combine into a force irresistible to the Great Powers, and make us the envy of the world. In addition, of course, none of us will have to pay any taxes ever

'One small step for Man,' he says

By Dr. ANTHONY MICHAELIS and ADRIAN BERRY
Science Staff, at the Manned Spacecraft Centre, Houston.

MAN set foot on the moon at 1:56 a.m. E.S.T. today when Neil Armstrong, 38, stepped down from Eagle, the lunar module, 31 hours earlier than originally planned. He was followed 16 minutes later by Col. Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin, Jr. who had guided Eagle to a landing on the moon's surface at 9:18 p.m.

COL. EDWIN ALDRIN

Neil would have an excellent chance of surviving the trip, says Dr. Michaelis. "He is a very fit man," he says. "He is a very fit man," he says. "He is a very fit man," he says.

The hatch was opened at 5:39 a.m. Armstrong was taking his time getting out. At 5:50 a.m. Armstrong, wearing backwashed, asked Aldrin: "How am I doing?" The answer came back: "You are doing fine." He was not a few minutes later.

At about 5:55 a.m., as the first live pictures came down, Armstrong was seen climbing down backwashed. As he explored the ground with his boot, he said: "It is like powdered charcoal. It is fine layers." As he actually stepped up to the moon he said: "One small step for Man."

Armstrong and Aldrin were not due to begin their walk until 7:17 a.m. after several hours' rest, but before midnight they asked permission from Mission Control at Houston to start their walk earlier. Radio word this reply: "We do not want you to start earlier."

PLAQUE UNCOVERED

Armstrong began the walk, whose chief object was to gather samples of the moon's surface, after climbing backwashed down the nose range of Eagle's ladder. He had reached the operation many times on earth. His left foot was the first to make contact with the moon.

The walk followed the module's descent from Apollo 11 to a landing on the far side of Tranquility Bay. One of Armstrong's first tasks in the moon suit was to rig a television camera on the side of the module's descent stage bearing the nose-mounted antenna. Camera gear for the moon, used by President Nixon and the Apollo 11 crew.

Dr. Charles Berry, medical director of the Space Agency, said that the decision to leave Eagle earlier than planned was agreed to because "it would be virtually impossible for anyone to sleep in that condition."

VIEW 'BEAUTIFUL'

At 12:13 a.m. Buzz Aldrin broadcast this message to the world: "I would like everyone to pause for a moment to contemplate the results of the past few hours and give thanks to his for his own way."

Immediately after the astronauts had landed—some minutes earlier—they started radiating back a description of the rugged terrain around them. With the clear efficiency and lack of emotion which has been the hallmark of the astronauts, they announced that Mission Control and the world: "It is beautiful from here."

Kennedy may face crash summons

By MABEL ELLIOTT in Edgartown, Mass.

SENATOR EDWARD KENNEDY is expected to receive a summons today to appear in court for failing to report the accident in which his car plunged into Narragansett Sound killing a woman passenger, Miss Mary Supina.

The night of the crash between the time he left the scene and the time he returned to his home in Edgartown, Mass., he reportedly took a trip to the Narragansett Pier Hotel, where he was seen by a police officer.

Supina, 34, was killed when her car was struck by Kennedy's car as it was backing out of a parking space in the hotel parking lot. The car was seen by a police officer at the scene.

Cabinet changes imminent

By Our Political Editor

Mr. Kerry Packer's swoop on Parliament took MPs by surprise yesterday. Although he has spent many hours closeted with Ministers, including the Prime Minister, it was thought that he was trying to arrange a hereditary peerage for himself. Mr. Packer gave a hint of his intentions two days ago when he said, "I am not a politician, but I am a businessman, and I am interested in the future of this country."
